CALL NUMBER: OSB MSS fc.37

CREATOR: Montagu, Charles, Duke of Manchester, 1660?-1722

TITLE: Manchester papers

DATES: 1697-1737

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 3.5 linear feet (1 box) + 17 volumes

LANGUAGE: In English, French, Latin, Italian and Dutch.

SUMMARY: The papers contain correspondence, copies of treaties, speeches and credentials, orders, memoranda, reports, newsletters and other papers mostly relating to diplomatic, political and military affairs in western Europe during the War of the Spanish Succession. In addition to documenting Manchester's missions to the republic of Venice and the court of France, the papers provide much detail on shifting relations among the northern powers, the break between France and England following the former's recognition of James III, English concern over Jacobite activities on the Continent, and negotiations with the Low Countries and Savoy. Major correspondents writing from England on politics and diplomacy include the Earls of Albemarle, Jersey, Shrewsbury and Sunderland, and secretaries James Vernon, Robert Yard, Joseph Addison and Matthew Prior. Other correspondents include the Duke of Marlborough and J. Chetwynd, writing on military matters, and Sir P. Medows, William Blathwayt, James Cresset, Francis Schonenberg, Abraham Stanyan and Alexander Stanhope, addressing affairs in various countries. Manchester's letters to Blathwayt, located in Series II, describe life at the French court and events leading up to the French violation of the Treaty of Ryswick.

Processing Information

This register reproduces the calendar of the fifteen Manchester albums that appeared in the Appendix to the Eighth Report of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts (1881). No attempt has been made to correct or revise these item-level descriptions. The two letterbooks were not included in the original calendar. These letters have been listed by recipient, place, and date, but summaries have not been provided.

Scope and Contents

The Manchester Papers are a group of over 1,000 letters and other documents concerning the professional and political activities of Charles Montagu, 1st Duke of Manchester. The collection spans the dates 1697-1737, but the bulk of the material dates from between 1698 and 1708, the years of Manchester's embassies to Venice and Paris.

The collection consists of fifteen albums, two letterbooks, and one box of unbound letters. The items in the albums are arranged in a rough chronological order.

Volume 16 contains copies of letters written by Manchester to William Blathwayt and James Vernon during his service as Ambassador to Paris in 1700-01. The letters provide much information on political events, including the proclamation of the duc d'Anjou as King of Spain, the mounting preparations for war, and the break in relations between England and France following Louis XIV's recognition of James III in violation of the Treaty of Ryswick. There are descriptions of "Jacobite intrigues," life at Versailles, and events in the Low Countries.

Volume 17 contains copies of thirty letters written by Manchester in French between January and April of 1702. They are mainly brief business letters or requests for information. The letters in Box 18 consist mainly of business letters by Manchester to William Blathwayt written between 1699 and 1701.

(In French. Seven closely written pages. A translation is printed in Cole's Memoirs, p. 379) The Hague	1701 May 13

b. 7, f. 47	Abstract of the treaty between England, the Empire, and the States General. (Printed, with some verbal variations, in Cole's Memoirs, p. 416) The Hague	1701 Sep 7
b. 7, f. 48	Copy of the letter of the E of M, announcing his recall upon the recognition of the Pretender by the King of France, and a copy of M. de Torcy's reply. (In French. Translations are printed in Cole's Memoirs, p. 426)	1701 Oct 2
b. 8, f. 1	[M. Vroese or Vroesen] to the E of M, mentioning the correspondence of a Jesuit in London (Father Plaud) with the French Court, and some military movements in Italy, whither the King of Spain had found it necessary to send reinforcements of his best troops. (In French) Paris	1702 Jan 7
b. 8, f. 2	The Abbé Melani to the E of M, cautioning him against "Milord de Maleborath" [Marlborough], who had sent to make enquiries respecting the Earl's delay in leaving Paris, and giving an account of the hardships endured by the mother and wife of the Count Bosselli in the Bastille, where the Governor had made them suffer for the Count's escape. (In French. 7 pages) Paris	1702 Jan 4
b. 8, f. 3	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, giving an account of the illness of the King of Spain, and of the recall (at the instigation of France) of certain officers from the Spanish army in Italy, who were supposed to be too favourably inclined to Austrian interests. He suggested, in a postscript, that when the time came for his own recall he should have Letters of Credence to the King of Portugal, who might be persuaded to act as the Allies desired. (In French) Madrid	1702 Jan 11
b. 8, f. 4	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon (but according to the endorsement "sent open to Lord Manchester.") He describes his successful efforts to protect the interests of British traders in Spain, the difficulty with which the Governor of Cadiz was restrained from firing at British frigates driven under the citadel by a violent storm, and the lethargy with which the Spanish nation abandoned itself to French influence. He had been questioned on the subject of the removal of the Arms of England from his house, and had not scrupled to give the real reason. (See vol. 6, No. 687, 53.) The French King had given assurance to the Spanish Ambassador that he would do everything in his power in support of his engagements, though not in a position to do as much as he desired. (In French. pp. 6) Madrid	1702 Jan 11
b. 8, f. 5	M. Jurieu to the E of M. He and his co-religionists looked upon the King of England as a man chosen by God to abate the pride of tyrants, preserve the liberty of Europe, and spread the true religion. The King of England had quite as much right to uphold the Edict of Nantes as the King of France to interfere in the matter of the succession to the English throne. Letters had been sent to the principal Ministers of the State to the effect that God had not blessed previous treaties, because His interests had been altogether forgotten in them. The Earl was implored, on that and other accounts, to press upon the attention of the King the interests of Protestants abroad. Memorials on the subject had been sent to Mr. Secretary Vernon. (In French. 7 pages) Also postscript to the same, written on separate paper, so that while the letter could be shown to various persons, the "petites affaires" between Jurieu and the Earl would be kept to themselves. This relates to the amount and mode of remittance of money to be paid to Jurieu, and to M. Caillaud. The latter, it seems, undertook the "correspondences de France," but not the "correspondences de Flandre." The details had been arranged by Mr. Blathwayt and Mr. Vernon. The remittances, however, were not sent quite in accordance with the wishes of the "correspondents." (In French. 4 pages)	n.d.
b. 8, f. 6	Memorandum relating to the affairs of Lithuania, including the death of the young Sapieha. (In French) Warsaw	1702 Jan 20

b. 8, f. 7	M. Martine to [the E of M], promising to keep him informed of events which might occur at Paris, but pointing out that it would be necessary to take some precautions. Martine could not depend on any official position to enable him to send his letters openly, because he could not claim it on the ground of his employment in the service of the Republic of Geneva, and his employment in the service of the Court of Cassell would cease with the expected rupture. (In French) Paris	1702 Jan 27
b. 8, f. 8	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, on the affairs of the Court of Spain. (In French. pp. 6) Madrid	1702 Jan 25
b. 8, f. 9	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, referring again to the financial embarrassments of Spain, mentioning the delay of the British ships of war at Cadiz through stress of weather, and the rumour from France that the King of Spain was to command in Italy in person, and touching on some minor details of Spanish affairs. (In French. 6 closely written pages.) Madrid	1702 Jan 26
b. 8, f. 10	Unsigned paper (possible sent by Martine, though not in his handwriting), giving information of the decision of the Council and King in France in favour of the departure of the King of Spain for Naples. The latter would probably go on afterwards to the Milanese, if, indeed, there were not found insuperable objections to the whole project at the last moment. Much surprise had been caused by the ready vote of 5,000,000 £ to the King in England. Various rumours which had reached the writer are mentioned, and among them one that the Princess of Denmark was pregnant. (In French.) Paris	1702 Jan 27
b. 8, f. 11	John Cole to the E of M, on the affairs of Lithuania, where the families of Sapiieha and Oginski had become reconciled (thus opening the way to peace between Sweden and Poland) on the negotiations of the Emperor with the Elector of Cologne, and on the warlike preparations in the Netherlands, where the Resolutions taken in England had given much encouragement. Amsterdam	1702 Jan 27
b. 8, f. 12	M. Plantamour to the E of M, congratulating him on his appointment as First Secretary of State, and mentioning enclosure. (In French) Berlin	1702 Jan 28
b. 8, f. 13	Enclosure, giving some particulars of news lately received at Berlin. (In French) Berlin	1702 Jan 28
b. 8, f. 14	M. Martine to the E of M, suggesting that his letter should, for the sake of secrecy, be directed, under cover, to some person in trade. A little judicious expenditure might aid in the discovery of what was going on at Court. M. Martine was not in any way actuated by a regard for his own interest, and he would prefer to receive whatever the Earl might be pleased to give him, not in one sum, but as an annual salary. (In French) Paris	1702 Jan 31
b. 8, f. 15	Paper (unsigned, and possible sent by M. Martine, but not in his handwriting), on French military affairs, and the projected expedition of the King of Spain to Naples and the Milanese, on the news from various parts of Europe, and especially from Italy, and the alarm excited in France by the attitude of England. (In French) Paris	1702 Jan 31
b. 8, f. 16	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, giving an account of the alarm felt in Spain by the projected voyage of the King to Naples, of the refusal of the traders of Madrid to make a special contribution to meet emergencies, and of the hopeless condition of Spain in general. He mentions enclosure of a copy of a letter from the King of France to the King of Spain. (In French) Madrid	1702 Feb 9

b. 8, f. 17	G. Stepney to the E of M, expressing hopes of the success of the Imperialists in Italy, and of the accession of the Archduke to the Crown of Naples, and asking for the Earl's influence that he might be appointed to bear the King's congratulations upon that event. Count Mansfeldt, the Austrian "President of War," had always lived in good correspondence with the Duke of Savoy, and still hoped he might "play his old game and change sides." It would therefore be expedient "so to manage Count Maffei as to keep open a door for reconciliation to which the Duke's natural love of change would contribute." Jordan was "like to go out in a snuff at Paris," as his master's "volatile spirit was at last fixed in favour of the Allies." Perhaps Bavaria would do the same after the vigorous resolutions of the English Parliament, which had inspired great confidence in Austria. An enclosure is mentioned. Vienna	1702 Feb 5
b. 8, f. 18	Memorandum (endorsed "Stepney,") giving particulars of the Austrian troops destined for the expedition to Naples, against which the Nuncio, Prince Eugene, and the Envoy of Modena had remonstrated, as calculated to weaken the Imperial forces elsewhere. A draft treaty between the King of Poland and the Emperor for the supply of troops to the latter had been brought from Warsaw. Vienna	1702 Feb 5
b. 8, f. 19	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, showing how completely Spain was under the influence of France, even to matters of ecclesiastical patronage, and how it would be through that influence that the King would set out for Naples, and giving some financial, military, and naval details. (In French. 7 closely written pages.) Madrid	1702 Feb 8
b. 8, f. 20	"J.G." to "Mr. Hainning, at the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Portland's lodgings," giving an account of the news which had reached Paris of the surprise of Cremona, effected by Prince Eugene, and of his subsequent defeat by the French, though he had retained Marshal Villeroy as his prisoner. Paris	1702 Feb 10
b. 8, f. 21	Alexander Stanhope to the E of M, expressing satisfaction with the great public spirit displayed by the Dutch, and their readiness for war. He touches on the humiliation of Marshal Villeroy, and the various probabilities of the political and military situation. Lord Albemarle had arrived. The Hague	1701/02 Feb 10/21
b. 8, f. 22	M. Hervart to the E of M, on the attitude of the various Swiss Cantons with respect to the recognition of the Duc d'Anjou as King of Spain, and the efforts of the Marquis de Puisieulx, the French Ambassador, to obtain it. (In French) Bern	1702 Feb 11
b. 8, f. 23	Etienne Caillaud to the E of M, informing him that the Comte de Breuille and a person named La Roche were supposed to have embarked at the Brill for London. It was expected that the address of La Roche in London could be obtained from his wife. The Earl was thanked for his protection of Caillaud's brother. The return of M. Coetlogon to Brest, without the galleons, which remained at Vera Cruz, would seriously derange the finances of Louis XIV. (In French) Rotterdam	1702 Feb 21
b. 8, f. 24	Unsigned memorandum (by M. Hervart?) on the attitude of the Swiss Cantons in relation to Austria and to France. They had decided that they would not congratulate the Duc d'Anjou [on his accession to the throne of Spain]. The Marquis de Puisieulx had represented the affair at Cremona as advantageous to the French, and had, in consequence, been compared to the "Cuckold in the Comedy," who was beaten and content. (In French) Baden	1702 Feb 18
b. 8, f. 25	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, on British subjects who had become naturalised in Spain, especially Francis Archer, a banker, said to be a violent Papist and a partisan of France, and a zealous supporter of the party opposed to "the rights of the legitimate succession in the Protestant line." (In French) Madrid	1702 Feb 22

b. 8, f. 26	M. Schonenberg to Mr. Secretary Vernon, giving an account of the suspicions entertained in Spain that the Spanish King's intended voyage to Naples might be followed by his abandonment of Spain for the throne of Naples and Sicily alone, of the discontent general among all ranks in Spain, and of the difficulty in finding money for the public service. M. Schonenberg maintains the accuracy of the details in this and previous letters of the helpless condition of Spain, though the reports of some persons, and even of some consuls, might cause a different impression. The partisans of France were striving to inspire confidence in expectation of the return of the Mexican fleet. Their boasts would probably come to nothing, but the allies would do well to make a demonstration with promptitude. (In French. 7 pages) Madrid	1702 Feb 22
b. 8, f. 27	Memorandum (unsigned) on the proceedings of the Swiss Cantons, including their resolution to accede to the demand of the Emperor for a levy of troops. The Protestant Cantons had decided that they would not recognise the Duc d'Anjou as King of Spain; the others held the question ad referendum. (In French) Baden	1702 Feb 22
b. 8, f. 28	M. Hervart to the E of M, mentioning difficulties caused by the demand of the Canton of Zurich to nominate the Colonel of one of the regiments demanded by the Emperor from the Swiss. (In French) Bern	1702 Feb 22
b. 8, f. 29	M. Hervart to the E of M, expressing an opinion that the Swiss Cantons would remain firm in their resolve not to recognise the Duc d'Anjou as King of Spain. (In French) Bern	1702 Feb 25
b. 8, f. 30	M. Hervart to the E of M, expressing an opinion that the French Ambassador would be unsuccessful in the demand which he had made for a corps of 6,000 Swiss, according to the terms of the Treaty of Alliance, and giving some of his reasons. (In French) Bern	1702 Feb 28
b. 8, f. 31	Joseph Shallett to the E of M, to the effect that the province in which he was had been drained of troops (for the intended campaign in Italy) and of money (which had been sent to France). Barcelona	1702 Mar 7
b. 8, f. 32	G. Stepney to the E of M, calling attention to two points in an enclosed paper. He adds: "I must entreat your Lordship that what I write to you upon occasion may not interfere with Mr. Secretary in what relates to his province, and that he be left to relate to his Majesty all that I have to represent. Your Lordship is sensible this is a duty I owe him in his post, and if it should happen otherwise it might be a means of making him less favourable to me." Vienna	1702 Mar 8
b. 8, f. 33	The enclosed paper to which reference is made above. The two points to which attention is called are: (1) The definitive sentence of the Pope (of which some details are given) in favour of the Elector Palatine in his dispute with the Duchess of Orleans. (2) The permission given by the Emperor to the King of the Romans "to make the campaign." He would command upon the Rhine, and the French would have full employment upon all hands. Vienna	1702 Mar 8
b. 8, f. 34	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, pointing out the difficulty of finding anyone in Spain who would incur the danger of corresponding with the English Government, after a rupture had occurred, and M. Schonenberg had himself left Madrid. This suggestion that such a person could be found had been made by William III. (In French. Six closely written pages) Madrid	1702 Mar 8
b. 8, f. 35	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, on the alarm and difficulties caused in Spain by the delay of the Spanish fleet in returning from Mexico, the exhaustion of the Spanish finances, and the uncertainty whether the King of Spain would undertake the voyage to Naples. (In French. 7 pages) Madrid	1702 Mar 8

b. 8, f. 36	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, mentioning the departure of half a dozen English families under escort of the English man-of-war "Filborough," the restitution of papers taken from the Queen Dowager's confessor, the appearance of a comet, and other minor matters. (In French) Madrid	1702 Mar 9
b. 8, f. 37	M. Schonenberg to the E of M. The King of Spain was about to embark for Italy, but without the young Queen. There was great embarrassment caused both to France and to Spain by the detention of the Mexican fleet. Spain was in a state of defencelessness both by land and by sea. The Danish army had received orders to leave Madrid. An enclosure is mentioned. (In French. 6 pages)	n.d.
b. 8, f. 38	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, suggesting that when the time should come for leaving Madrid he should return by way of Portugal. The Government of the Netherlands approved of this route, and had sent him a Letter of Credence for the King of Portugal. He hoped the King of England would take the same view. An enclosure is mentioned. (In French) Madrid	1702 Mar 22
b. 8, f. 39	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, requesting the latter to represent to the King that he was in urgent need of money for his ordinary and extraordinary expenses. His outlay had been very great, and there would be new calls upon him when he withdrew. (In French) Madrid	1702 Mar 22
b. 8, f. 40	G. Stepney to the E of M, announcing the ratification of the article against the Pretender, and expressing some anxiety respecting the position of Prince Eugene in Italy, although the expedition to Naples had been deferred. (Partly in cipher) Attached is a memorandum giving the news which had reached Vienna of the progress of events in Europe. (pp. 5) Vienna	1702 Mar 23
b. 8, f. 41	Etienne Caillaud to [the E of M], mentioning enclosure of a list of French vessels of war as existing in 1699, promising to send such information as he could obtain of changes in their number and disposition, and describing the great sorrow felt in the United Provinces at the death of King William. Some consolation, however, was found in the good disposition of the Queen, his successor, and of the English Parliament. (In French) Rotterdam	1702 Mar 28/17
b. 8, f. 42	Richard Brown to the Mayor of Canterbury, demanding restitution of fees paid by him to the gaoler of the gaol to which the mayor had committed him. "The Venetian Ambassador's in St. James's Square"	1702 Apr 6
b. 8, f. 43	The Abbé Melani to the E of M, expressing great regret at the death of King William. The French Court had gone into mourning for him as Stadholder of the United Provinces. The Abbé could assure the Earl that if Her Majesty would announce to the King of France the death of her predecessor, and her own accession, the period of mourning would be extended, and she would be acknowledged as Queen of England. Ministers who had been employed to bring about a good understanding between the two nations had fomented quarrels through a regard to their own interests. An attempt should now be made to establish between England and France "un honneste correspondance, laissant aux Allemans à faire la guerre avec leur methode ordinaire." (In French) Paris	1702 Apr 7
b. 8, f. 44	M. Hervart to the E of M, on dissensions among the different Swiss Cantons, especially with respect to the recognition of the Duc d'Anjou as King of Spain. The Canton of Lucerne had now recognised him, and might therefore have to provide him with forces for the defence of the Milanese. (In French) Bern	1702 Apr 19
b. 8, f. 45	L. [Sir Lambert] Blackwell to the E of M, sending present of "graine tobacco" and an enclosure with the news from Naples to the first of April, and from Rome to the fourth of April. (pp. 5) Florence	1702 Mar 29/ Apr 9

b. 8, f. 46	Sir Lambert Blackwell to the E of M. The Grand Duke, Prince, and Princess [of Tuscany], were very uneasy because the King of Spain had not yet left Naples. News of a great action fought by Prince Eugene, who was watching Vendôme, might be expected. An enclosure is mentioned.	n.d.
b. 8, f. 47	Memorandum giving the news from Naples up to April 8, from Rome up to April 11, from Pisa up to April 14, and from Leghorn up to April 14.	1702
b. 8, f. 48	Sir Lambert Blackwell to the E of M, expressing his regret at the death of King William III, and his wish to be transferred to Venice, and mentioning an enclosure, which seems to be the above (47). Florence	1702 Apr 4/15
b. 8, f. 49	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, expressing surprise that he had received no letter from his Lordship's office, and asking to be honored with instructions to communicate the death of King William and the accession of Queen Anne to the College. He was put to great charges, which the "perquisites by consulage" would not support in the event of war, and entreated the Earl to "patronise the propagating" his interest. There was good reason to suppose that his letters sent by way of Flanders had been delayed or intercepted since the French "turned out Prince Tassis [Taxis] at Brussels," and he suggested a remedy. He understood there would be no delay in Venice in acknowledging the Queen, as there had been in the case of her predecessor. Venice	1702 Apr 14
b. 8, f. 50	Thomas Kirke to the E of M, informing him that the Emperor's Envoy was about to quit Genoa, because the Government of the Republic had refused to comply with a demand for money for the campaign in Italy. Genoa	1702 Apr 18
b. 8, f. 51	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, giving various items of news, and among them the report of the English fleet being about to enter the Mediterranean. He was anxious to have a new commission from Her Majesty by the Earl's influence. He mentions the case of the Venetian Ambassador's messenger, who had been intercepted and sent to prison by the Mayor of Canterbury. (See letter of April 6, 42) Venice	1702 Apr 21
b. 8, f. 52	G. Stepney to the E of M, on the ill effects of not having an English fleet in the Mediterranean (which might have hindered the passage of the Duc d'Anjou) on the design of the Emperor with respect to Italy, and on the difficulty of "bringing about" the Duke of Savoy. Some exchanges of territory for the last-named purpose had been suggested, but such propositions could hardly be entertained before the end of the war. Vienna	1702 Apr 29
b. 8, f. 53	M. d'Ebeling (Envoy of Montbeliard) to the E of M, expressing hopes that England and the States General would support the re-establishment of His Serene Highness of Montbeliard in his sovereignty. (In French) The Hague	1702 May 2
b. 8, f. 54	Sir Lambert Blackwell to the E of M, mentioning enclosure of copies in Italian and English of the Grand Duke's answer to Her Majesty's letter, duplicates of which had been previously sent under another cover. He depended on the Earl's influence to have credential letters for Venice added to letters for Florence. He would attend to Lord Kingston's and Sir Alexander Rigby's affairs and send the Earl's picture. He was in correspondence with Prince Eugene, to whom he had done a service in respect of some deserters, and whom he had requested to send "the journal of the camp, by every quick conveyance," to the Earl. He wished to be remembered to Lord Halifax. Florence	1702 May 13

b. 8, f. 55	Sir Lambert Blackwell to the E of M, mentioning some enclosures, and among them a letter from Prince Eugene (with translation into English). The picture for the Earl of Kingston was of great value, and Sir Lambert parted with it purely to oblige him and the E of M. The copy for the latter might be put on board any man-of-war which came "so high" as Leghorn. The small merchant shipping there was not to be trusted to the value of 10 £. Sir Lambert again asked for credentials to Venice. Florence	1702 May 20
b. 8, f. 56	M. Schonenberg to the E of M, expressing his belief that the appearance of a fleet of the Allied Powers would be required to bring Portugal to a satisfactory attitude, as the Portuguese ministers had entered into very close and almost indissoluble engagements with the French. He hoped the Danish Envoy at Madrid had by this time begun to send the Earl particulars of events in Spain. (In French) Lisbon	1702 May 23
b. 8, f. 57	Prince Eugene of Savoy to Sir Lambert Blackwell, thanking him for a service rendered in respect of some deserters, and explaining the difficulties in the way of sending his diary to the E of M, as all matters relating to the diaries were issued from the German Chancery, and it would be a long process to translate them into either French or Italian. (In Italian) Imperial Camp at Curtotone	1702 May 25
b. 8, f. 58	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, giving the news which had reached him from Naples up to May 9, and from Rome up to May 20, with particulars of military movements of the French and Germans in the State of Mantua, etc. Venice	1702 May 26
b. 8, f. 59	M. Jurieu to the E of M, expressing his regret that the latter had been succeeded as Secretary of State by Lord Nottingham, with whom, however, he would maintain communication. (In French) Rotterdam	1702 Jun 7/May 27
b. 8, f. 60	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, thanking the latter for the renewal of his commission and expressing fears that some difficulties might arise from the fact that the State of Venice had prevented an English ship, with eight English seamen on board, freighted by the Emperor's Ambassador, and carrying the Imperial colors, from leaving port. Venice	1702 Jun 2
b. 8, f. 61	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, giving particulars of news received from Naples up to May 26, and from Rome up to May 27, with some details of the military movements, in Italy, etc. Venice	1702 Jun 2
b. 8, f. 62	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, giving the news received at Venice from Naples up to May 30, and from Rome up to June 3, with some particulars of military movements. Venice	1702 Jun 9
b. 8, f. 63	Hugh Broughton to the E of M, giving news from Naples up to June 6, from Rome up to June 10, and the particulars known at Venice, at the date of the letter, of military movements in Italy. Venice	1702 Jun 6
b. 8, f. 64	Sir Lambert Blackwell to the E of M, thanking the latter for recommending Sir Lambert to Lord Nottingham, from whom he had received new credentials and instructions about Sir Alexander Rigby's business. He trusted the Earl had received the snuff. He refers again to his account with Lord Kingston and to the painting to be sent to the Earl. Florence	1702 Aug 12

(42 pages. Printed, in part, in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 394)	n.d.
b. 9, f. 12	Paper unsigned and unaddressed, but probably drawn up by direction of Martine. It gives some particulars of French naval, military, and financial affairs. Madame de Maintenon was so careful to prevent the King receiving any news which might annoy him that she was beforehand with every one who had occasion to speak to him, and had recently been in the habit of instructing M. de Catinat as to what he should say. Mention is also made of the affair of Mirandola, for which M. de la Citardie was blamed. A number of men in disguise had been introduced into the place on pretence of a fair, after which "the Princess" had sent for Citardie and offered him a passport enabling him to retire with his battalion. She had made common cause with Prince Eugene, because the French were unable to protect her from the insults of the Germans. She was Regent during the minority of the young Prince, her grandson. It was said, there were orders for the arrest of De la Citardie. It was certain that Catinat had left [Paris?] on the 2nd; Prince Eugene was retreating and his troops going into winter quarters. The numbers of French, Spanish, and Savoyard troops intended for the expedition to Italy are stated. (In French, pp. 7) Paris	1702 Jan 12
b. 9, f. 13	Copy of a letter from the King of France to the King of Spain, expressing strong approval of the expedition of the latter to Italy. (In French)	1702 Jan 23

b. 9, f. 18	Copy of a letter (unsigned) to a friend of the writer's in Holland, on the surprise of Cremona, and on French and Spanish prospects in Italy, the Netherlands, etc. The tone is one of indignation against the ambition of the King of France, which threatened the country with disgrace and defeat at the hands of the enemies be provoked, and which might cause a demand among the people for a change in Government. These sentiments are represented as being common in France. It was also considered necessary for the security of England and Holland that the House of Bourbon should cease to have any share in the monarchy of Spain, and that assurances should be given for the protection of commerce. (In French, 17 pages. Probably sent to the E of M through the agency of Martine.) Paris	1702 Feb 24
b. 9, f. 19	Report of the Lords Commissioners of Trade to the King, setting forth the state of defence of the several "Plantations" of America as ascertained by the replies of the Governors to the enquiries of the Commissioners. b. 9, f. 33	Translation into English of a letter from Cardinal Grimani to Cardinal Paulucci, remonstrating against the reported intention of the Pope to send a Legate to congratulate the Duc d'Anjou as King of Spain upon his arrival at Naples. This is followed by a translation of the reply of Cardinal Paulucci, to the effect that, although the Pope intended to send a legate to congratulate the King of Spain upon his arrival in Italy, no investiture had yet been granted. If we may believe common fame, he himself was to have been a peer and Lord Treasurer... It is, I believe, very certain that the Duke of Marlborough and Lord Treasurer refused to sit any longer in council with so wily a Secretary, and would have laid down themselves, if he had not been removed. (In French. See A. Stanyan to the E of M, 50) Geneva	1708 Mar 16

b. 13, f. 47	Henry Newton to the E of M, to the effect that he had little news to mention except the arrival of a ship from Turkey, which had been captured by a Zealand privateer. Leghorn	1707/08 Mar 16
b. 13, f. 48	J. Vanbrugh to the E of M, regretting that Great Britain had trusted too much her navy, and that there were no land forces in Scotland to meet the projected invasion. The news that Admiral Byng was in sight of the French fleet, however, led to the belief that no landing would be effected. The Duke of Marlborough had letters from Paris to the effect that "this project was opinionated by the King of France, against the opinion of others; which would incline one to think if it did not succeed one way he wished it would another, by getting rid of the Pretender, which is likely enough to happen." There is also some discussion of operatic matters. (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 318) London	1707/08 Mar 16
b. 13, f. 49	John Scudamore to the E of M, on damask velvets wanted by the Duchess of Marlborough, and the price of marble chimney-pieces. The English fleet at Gibraltar was short of provisions. Genoa	1708 Mar 17

b. 13, f. 54	J. Addison to [the E of M], giving some small items of news, including the arrest of the Duke of Hamilton. The French squadron was supposed to have "got into some of the ports of Norway." (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 328)	1707/08 Mar 23
b. 13, f. 55	Colonel Broune de Camus to the E of M, recommending to his favour an Irish gentleman named Hurly, who wished to serve as captain of cavalry in the British army in Spain. (In French) Pavia	1708 Mar 24
b. 13, f. 56	A. Stanyan to the E of M, on difficulties arising out of the neglect of the King of Prussia to pay the Swiss troops in Neufchâtel, etc. (The principal part is printed in Cole's Memoirs, p. 518) Berne [Bern]	1708 Mar 25

b. 13, f. 58	J. Addison to the E of M on proceedings in Parliament. Cockpit	1708 Mar 30
b. 13, f. 59	A. Stanyan to the E of M, to the effect that an agreement would probably be made for the neutrality of Neufchâtel. (Printed, with the exception of a postscript dated April 1, on the subject of the Dunkirk Squadron, in Cole's Memoirs, p. 521) Bern	1708 Mar 31

b. 13, f. 60	J. Addison to the E of M on proceedings in Parliament. Cockpit	1708 Apr 2/13

b. 13, f. 62	The Earl of Sunderland to the E of M, informing him of the Queen's resentment when she learned that an affront had been put upon him at Venice. (Printed. Cole's Memoirs, p. 524) Whitehall	1708 Apr 6/17
b. 13, f. 63	A. Stanyan to the E of M, informing him that a new project for the neutrality of Neufchâtel would in all probability be ratified. (Printed. Cole's Memoirs, p. 523) Bern	1708 Apr 8
b. 13, f. 64	J, Addison to the E of M, touching briefly on various matters of gossip... The Government was calling on suspected persons in Scotland, including the Duke of Atholl, to make their appearance. The Venetian Ambassador had been forbidden the Court. Several merchants thought a fitting reparation for the affront put upon the Earl at Venice would be free importation of English cloth there... Cockpit	1708 Apr 9
b. 13, f. 65	J. Addison to the E of M, to the effect that the Venetian Ambassador had received "with great uneasiness and something like resentment" the message forbidding him the Court until the Earl had received reparation for the insult at Venice. Parliament was prorogued for a fortnight, and would probably be suddenly dissolved. (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 343) Cockpit	1708 Apr 13
b. 13, f. 66	The Duchess of Marlborough to the E of M, on musical matters. (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 337) St. James	1708 Apr 13
b. 13, f. 67	J. Chetwynd to the E of M, mentioning a report which had reached him of a defeat of a French fleet by Sir George Byng. He had no news of importance to communicate. Turin	1708 Apr 14
b. 13, f. 68	A. Stanyan to the E of M, announcing that the French King's ratification of the neutrality of Neufchâtel was expected, and suggesting that satisfaction should be demanded of the Pope for assistance rendered to the Pretender. (Printed. Cole's Memoirs, p. 524) Bern	1708 Apr 15
b. 13, f. 69	J. Addison to [the E of M], announcing the arrival in London and committal to the Tower of Lord Griffin, Lord Middleton's two sons and other persons arrested as accomplices in the late attempt of the Pretender. "The people were with much ado restrained from outraging them as they passed the streets." Fifty more state prisoners of distinction were expected. Mr. Smith was made Chancellor of the Exchequer. The factory at Borneo had been "ruined by the natives." He concludes: "It is said that the G. Duke furnished the Pope with the money that he gave the P.P. of Wales. If so, his Minister here will quickly hear of it." (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 348) Whitehall	1708 Apr 20
b. 13, f. 70	Lord Halifax to [the E of M]. He would always espouse Lord Manchester's interest though "sensible there were those who did desire" they "should not be well together." Everything would be done to obtain satisfaction for the insult to Lord Manchester at Venice. Lord Sunderland had "talked very roundly" to the Venetian Ambassador who had sent a Memorial in justification. Nothing short of a "public satisfaction" would be accepted. (Printed, in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 349)	1708 Apr 20
b. 13, f. 71	Copy of a letter (without signature) apparently to the E of M, on behalf of the Abbate Paolo Franceschini. (In Italian) Venice	1708 Apr 21

b. 13, f. 72	A. Stanyan to the E of M, expressing fears that the affairs of Toggenburg would give even more trouble than those of Neufchâtel (now believed to be settled), and explaining the religious and other difficulties of the case. (The principal part is printed in Cole's Memoirs, p. 525) Bern	1708 Apr 22
b. 13, f. 73	The Duke of Württemberg to the E of M, asking for authentic information respecting the issue of the French expedition to Scotland, concerning which there were contradictory reports. He hoped it was true that the "Chevallier Bings" [Byng] had obtained a considerable advantage. He had orders to proceed to H.R.H. at Turin, and thence to Susa to take command of a corps there. (In French) Mirandola	1708 Apr 27
b. 13, f. 74	E. Howe to the E of M, announcing the arrival of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene at Hanover. (Printed. Cole's Memoirs, p. 526) Hanover	1708 Apr 29

b. 14, f. 3	The Earl of Sunderland to the E of M, informing him that the Queen desired he should have the fullest reparation for the affront put upon him at Venice, and leave that place if he failed to obtain satisfaction. (Printed. Cole's Memoirs, p. 527) Whitehall	1708 Apr 20
b. 14, f. 4	J. Chetwynd to the E of M, giving an account of the various preparations made, and being made, for sending succours into Spain. Mr. Stanhope was expected. The Venetian Ambassador, passing through Turin, had failed to see H.R.H., who wished to have as little as possible to do with the Republic. Mr. Chetwynd asked for the Earl's interest with the Ministers. (pp. 6) Turin	1708 May 8
b. 14, f. 5	A. Stanyan to the E of M, It was not known that the ratifications of the Treaty of Neutrality for Neufchâtel had yet been exchanged. The differences respecting Toggenburg would probably be satisfactorily adjusted, so that the inhabitants could be secured in the free enjoyment of their religion and liberties. It was to be hoped that the Earl would, before leaving Venice, obtain satisfaction for the affront offered him "in visiting his gondola and what is more, plundering it." The Earl would naturally be "little obliged to Mr. Brown that drew him into the difficulty." Bern	1708 May 6
b. 14, f. 6	J. Chetwynd to the E of M. Mr. Stanhope had arrived, but was "almost as much in the dark" as Chetwynd himself about the expected reinforcement of 5,000 Imperial troops for Spain. He had written very pressingly on the subject both to the Duke of Marlborough and to Lord Sunderland. The delays of the Imperialists were causing uneasiness. "Mr. Palmes" would pass through Venice on his way to Turin. Perhaps, the Earl could ascertain Mr. Chetwynd's "destiny" from him. Turin	1708 May 8/19
b. 14, f. 7	General Palmes to the E of M, to the effect that he hoped to conclude his negotiation at Vienna, and proceed to Italy in a few days. Vienna	1708 May 9
b. 14, f. 8	The E of M to Prince Herculani, informing him that he was about to start for Vicenza, on the following day, on his return home and that a complete rupture with Venice was imminent. The Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene were both at Hanover, and the Duke would not return to England but join the army at once. (Draft. In French) Venice	1708 May 10

b. 14, f. 9	S. Edwin to the E of M. Correspondence was difficult, as letters were commonly opened, if not intercepted on the way. The Duke of Hamilton had been bailed, and would, in all probability, be "one of the sixteen peers for Scotland." Sir James Montagu was not yet made Attorney-General. The Whigs were stronger in Parliament by 44 votes since the last election, and the Tories and Jacobites much dejected... Exchequer	1708 May 11
b. 14, f. 10	J. Vanbrugh to the E of M, chiefly on operatic affairs, but with the following postscript: "My Lady Marlborough goes now very often to Court, and is in perfect good humour. I hope all will keep right." (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 354) London	1708 May 11

b. 14, f. 13	Philippo Herculani to [the E of M]. He expected to be at Mantua on the 21st, and to go on thence to Milan. He thanked the Earl for procuring him the protection of the Queen, and an employment in which he might be useful to the common cause. He hoped to receive letters from the Earl at Milan, and would then endeavour to conclude a business which should awake in the Court of Vienna sentiments consistent with the Imperial dignity. He had never been guilty of any base action in his life, and would not enter upon one now that he had the honour to serve His Imperial Majesty. (In Italian) Crocetta	1708 May 15
b. 14, f. 14	Valeriano Pellegrini to the E of M, announcing that he was about to set out for Düsseldorf in the following week. (In Italian) Verona	1708 May 17
b. 14, f. 15	The E of M to the Duke of Marlborough, expressing the belief that the Duke would be the deliverer of this country, and that reparation would be made for the affront offered to himself at Venice. (Copy) Venice	1708 May 18

b. 14, f. 17	S. Edwin to the E of M. "The Title of Dover" was not to be given to "Mr. Massam," but to the Duke of Queensborough. The elections had been favourable to the Whigs. There would be another attempt to make Lord Somers and Sir James Montague [Montagu] President of the Council and Attorney- General. A sea expedition with ten regiments from England and Ireland, and the great naval preparation of the Dutch were much talked of. Exchequer	1708 May 18

b. 14, f. 21	Thomas Pritchard to the E of M, mentioning the indisposition of the Venetian Ambassador, and consequent difficulty of delivering a box to him and obtaining a receipt. There were great complaints of the scarcity of money in England. (Printed in "Court and Society from Elizabeth to Anne," ii, 358) London	1708 Jun 1

b. 14, f. 22	J. Chetwynd to the E of Mon the formation of camps at Bussolino and Ivrea, the seizure of Comaccio, and the probable reluctance of other powers to let the Emperor have so good a port in the Adriatic. The Queen of Spain was in Milan. There had been no news of the fleet. Turin	1708 Jun 2

Cardinal Grimani, the Viceroy of Naples, however, was of opinion that it might be with advantage detained in Italian waters, as there did not appear to be a necessity for large reinforcements in Spain. Great vigilance would be required to thwart the schemes of the French in favour of an Italian league with the Pope. There had been a happy conclusion of the great meeting at the Hague. The Prince of Orange would be "kept under," and the common good of the Netherlands "advanced and secured. The Parliament of England had cause to rejoice at this good news." (pp. 7) Paris and Amsterdam	n.d.
