Processing Information

This finding aid was revised in 2021 to address outdated or harmful descriptive language. During that revision, description was changed in the biographical and scope and contents notes. References to Japanese American "relocation" and "internment" during World War II were removed and replaced with community recommended terminology, such as "incarceration."

Previous versions of this finding aid may be available. Please contact Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library for details. If you have questions or comments about these revisions, please contact Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library or the Archival and Manuscript Description Committee. For more information on reparative archival description at Yale, see Yale's Statement on Harmful Language in Archival Description.

Collections are processed to a variety of levels, depending on the work necessary to make them usable, their perceived research value, the availability of staff, competing priorities, and whether or not further accruals are expected. The library attempts to provide a basic level of preservation and access for all collections, and does more extensive processing of higher priority collections as time and resources permit.

These materials have been arranged and described according to national and local standards. For more information, please refer to the Beinecke Manuscript Unit Processing Manual.

Biographical / Historical

Miyeko Takita (1924-2019), a Japanese-American woman, was forcibly removed by the United States government, along with her mother, Tsuneyo Aoyagi Takita (1901-1973), and sister, Aiko Takita (1926- ), to the Tanforan Assembly Center, a temporary detention center in San Bruno, California, in the spring of 1942, and to the Topaz War Relocation Center, an American concentration camp in Millard County, Utah, in 1942 October. The Takita sisters were released from the Topaz concentration camp, where they were involved in school, music, and the Protestant church, in 1945 October.

Miyeko Takita earned graduate degrees in Library Sciences at the University of California, Berkeley. She worked for the United States Army as a librarian at Heidelberg University and after was accepted as a Fulbright Scholar at Keio University in Japan, where she met chemist Masato Tanabe. Upon moving to San Francisco, the two married and eventually had three children: Robert (Sukie) Tanabe, Kenneth (Michele) Tanabe, and Michiko Tanabe.
