Processing Information

Collections are processed to a variety of levels, depending on the work necessary to make them usable, their perceived research value, the availability of staff, competing priorities, and whether or not further accruals are expected. The library attempts to provide a basic level of preservation and access for all collections, and does more extensive processing of higher priority collections as time and resources permit.

This finding aid was produced from a preliminary item-level list provided by the dealer and augmented by the processing archivist.

Day Family

The Day family were traders at the Navajo Indian Reservation in eastern Arizona. In 1883, Samuel Edward Day, Sr. (1845-1925) surveyed extensions to eastern and southern boundaries of the Navajo reservation in Arizona Territory for the United States government. Soon afterward, his wife, Anna P. Burbridge Day (1849-1932), and their sons, Charles L. Day (1879-1918), Samuel Edward Day, Jr. (1882-1963), and William Day (born 1885), joined him at a homestead at what became Window Rock, Arizona, and was also the site of the St. Michael's Mission founded in 1896 by the Order of the Friars Minor (Franciscans). In 1902, the Day family established the Thunderbird Trading Post at mouth of Canyon de Chelly, Arizona. In 1912, Samuel Edward Day, Jr., married Kate Roanhorse (1885-1960), a daughter of Navajo chief Manuelito (1818-1893).

Simeon Schwemberger (1867-1931)

Simeon Schwemberger, born George C. Schwemberger, was a Franciscan friar, photographer, and trader in Arizona and New Mexico. Born in Cincinnati, Ohio, he entered candidacy into the Order of the Friars Minor (Franciscans) in 1887 and took solemn vows in 1896. In 1901, he joined the St. Michael's Mission at Window Rock, Arizona, and the following year began experimenting with photography. In 1908, Schwemberger left the Mission and Order and operated the Indian Arts Studio at Gallup, New Mexico. From 1911 until his death, he worked at trading posts at Gallup and Cedar Springs, New Mexico.
