Collection Contents

Series I: Material removed from Binders, 1935–1949

7.02 linear feet (6 boxes)

The binders include correspondence and other materials documenting Canby's professional activities during the 1940s. The binders feature approximately 983 pieces of correspondence, including both original incoming letters to Canby and typescript carbon copies of his outgoing correspondence.

Binder [1] contains correspondence relating to Canby's professional work on 19th-century American authors Henry David Thoreau and Walt Whitman, although some other material, such as manuscript drafts and notes, addresses, clippings, and printed ephemera, can also be found. Some letters address specifically the production and reception of Canby's Thoreau (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1939) and Walt Whitman, an American (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1943). Correspondence also touches on Canby's work as a contributor to the Saturday review. Correspondents include publishers, the Walt Whitman Foundation, and other Thoreau and Whitman scholars. Correspondents include: Gay Wilson Allen, Carl Bode, Allen French, Clifton Joseph Furness, Herbert V. Prochnow, Cleveland Rodgers, Joseph T. Shipley, and Frances Winwar.

Binder [2] consists chiefly of correspondence, but also contains photographs, financial statements, contracts, short texts, and a clipping. In addition to some fan mail, correspondence with publishers Farrar & Rinehart, The Atlantic monthly, and Houghton Mifflin Company concerns works by Canby published during the 1940s, including The Brandywine (New York: Farrar & Rinehart, 1941) and American memoir (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1947).

The bulk of the Binder [3] correspondents include Robert Ernest Spiller, Thomas H. Johnson, Willard Thorp, and the Macmillan Company. Letters with these correspondents relate chiefly to work on production of The Literary history of the United States (New York: Macmillan, 1948), to which Canby, Spiller, Johnson, and Thorp contributed as editors. Other correspondents include Stanley T. Williams, Townsend Scudder, Howard Mumford Jones, and Allan Nevins.

Binder [4] also includes correspondence dating from 1940 through 1949, with larger groups of letters with publishers Houghton Mifflin Company and D. Appleton-Century Company relating to publishing projects such as American memoirs and The Book of the short story respectively.

Arranged by binder in supplied binder number order.
