Biographical / Historical

Dorothy Gray (born October 23, 1922), actress, talent manager, and assistant to Katherine Dunham, grew up in Los Angeles, CA. The niece of Charlie Chaplin, Gray became a child actress at a very young age, appearing in films as early as 1924. She was later cast in a number of Hollywood productions, including uncredited roles in Symphony of Six Million (1932), Men in White (1934), and Rose-Marie (1936). In the 1940s she started working with jazz musicians and stage performers in Hollywood as an assistant and manager. When Gray was nineteen, she met Katherine Dunham at the Paramount Theater in Los Angeles. The two formed a close bond that was "romantic, sisterly, and maternal" (Das 2017). Dorothy Gray managed Katherine Dunham's business and bookings in the United States until her death in 1976. From the 1950s onward Gray was in two long term romantic relationships with two women, Ann Hathaway and Kellie Greene. Dorothy Gray died May 9, 1976, in Los Angeles, California.

The collection also documents her family and childhood.

A bulk of the collection material relates to her relationships with her social circle in California during the years 1951-1968. Included are love letters Gray exchanged with pianist Kellie Greene and jazz singer Ann Hathaway as well as photographs of their travels, family, and pets.
