Preferred Citation

Western Americana Card Photograph File. Yale Collection of Western Americana, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library.

History of the Collection

This collection derives from an illustration file maintained by the staff of the Yale Collection of Western Americana since 1952. The collection has served as a means for bringing together photographic materials acquired singularly and in small groups. Occasionally, a critical mass of photographs by a particular photographer or studio accrue within the collection and becomes the basis for an artificially created collection documenting that individual. This collection continues to embody this dynamic function and groups of photographic material will continue to become the basis of smaller individual collections.

During the late twentieth century, archivists preliminarily arranged and briefly described the collection in a print finding aid. In 2008, the print finding aid served as the basis for a thorough examination and detailed description of the collection.

Prior to 2008, library staff did not routinely document provenance information.

Scope and Contents

This collection consists of card photographs of various sizes and formats, as well as unmounted photographic prints. The collection documents a broad range of commercial photography between 1860 and 1910, mainly created by regional operators and traveling photographers. The collection also includes examples by renowned photographers, such as Frank Jay Haynes, William Henry Jackson, Alexander Martin, Isaiah West Taber, and Carleton E. Watkins.

The imagery provides diverse visual documentation of the natural and built environment, as well as portraits of the inhabitants of the American West during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Specific images include informal and studio portraits of American Indians and settlers, as well as views of cities and towns, mining and logging operations, railroads, military installations, agricultural activities, American Indian reservations, and natural scenery in and about the American West.

Image descriptions of photographic prints derive from inscriptions on the verso and recto of the item and from image analysis by the archivist. Descriptions of items in this finding aid include the dimensions of each photographic print in centimeters and the dimensions of its mount (when present) in centimeters. Descriptions usually include information about the working locations of photographer, and occasionally physical characteristics of items, such as image numbers applied by the photographer or inscriptions by a previous owner, as well as contextual information about the image.

Each folder contains a single photographic print, except when noted in the item description.

About Card Photographs

Most of the items in this collection are photographic prints mounted on cardboard, known as card photographs. During the nineteenth century, card photographs were a popular way to present photographic prints, especially carte-de-visite and cabinet photographs. The mounts for card photographs vary in format and dimensions, and the mounted photographic prints vary in technical processes. The photographic prints are usually albumen prints, but also include collodion prints, cyanotypes, gelatin silver prints, platinum prints, and salted paper prints.

Introduced in the United States in 1860, carte-de-visite photographs gain their name from French calling cards. The photographic prints, which usually measure 8.89 x 6.35 cm (2.125 x 3.5 in.), were mounted on cardboard 10 x 6 cm (2.5 X 4.5 in.). Carte-de-visite photographs remained a popular form in the United States into early 1870s, when they were largely replaced by cabinet photographs.

Cabinet photographs are larger than carte-de-visite photographs, usually 9.5 x 13.8 cm (3.5 x 5.5 in.), mounted on cardboard 10.5 x 16.4 cm (4.5 by 6.25 in.). Cabinet cards remained popular during the last two decades of the nineteenth century, as did other sized formats, including boudoir midget mounts, 5.1 x 8.6 cm (2 x 3.375 in.); victoria cards, 8.3 x 12.7 cm (3.25 x 5 in.); promenade photographs, 10.2 x 17.8 cm (4 x 7 in.); boudoir photographs, 13.3 x 21.6 cm (5.25 x 8.5 in.); imperial photographs, 17.5 x 25.1 cm (6.875 x 9.875 in.); and panel photographs, 29.5 x 10.2 cm (8.25 x 4 in.).

Card photograph mounts often have printed or embossed decorations conveying advertisements about the photographer, the studio, and location, as well as awards, areas of expertise, or prominent patrons. Photographers and other individuals, such as the subjects in the image or the collector of it, often wrote descriptive inscriptions about the photograph on the verso or recto of the cardboard mount.

Arrangement

Organized into three series. Series I. Identified Photographers. Series II. Unidentified Photographers. Series III. Oversize.

Given the dynamic nature of this collection, items will move in and out of the collection. The collection has no permanent box or folder designations for items in each series.

Collection Contents

Series I: Identified Photographers, circa 1851-1965

672 Folders

This series consists of photographic prints and their accompanying mounts that have dimensions less than 22 x 29 cm (8.7 x 11.4 in.) in size and created by identified photographers. Materials with larger dimensions are located in Series III. Oversize.

Photographs in this series are arranged in alphabetical order by surname of the photographer or the corporate name of a studio that created them and then chronologically therein.

9.2 x 17.2 cm on mount 10.0 x 17.2 cm
Manuscript on verso: "This is one outfit that I am with on the Roundup. They are camped about one mile from the Roundup. We make one roundup a day more 10 to 15 miles to make another. There was about 200 men on this roundup and each man has from 5 to 8 head of horses to ride. I expect you will figure up the number of horses [and] say you would like to count them but I will leave you to draw your own conclusions as to the facts. I am on a white face horse right opposite of the wagon I will make a cross right by my horse. L.S.G. - P.S. You can see the Cheyenne River in the distance it is a beautiful stream and a splendid range 43 miles from Custer on the road to Cheyenne City. In this picture we have drove the horses into camp and are about to change to set a fresh horse to ride. We change 2 to 3 times a day & ride from 50 to 75 miles a day, not right strait [sic] ahead but in what we call a circle that is getting all the cattle together each day and not get any cattle one day that we had the day before. L.S.G."
