Biographical / Historical

James Hadley: philologist; B.A., Yale, 1842; spent two years at the Yale Divinity School, 1844-1845; appointed tutor in Yale College in 1845, promoted to asst. prof. of Greek in 1848, in 1851 succeeded Theodore Dwight Woolsey, holding the chair of Greek until retirement.

Arthur Twining Hadley was born in New Haven, Connecticut, on April 23, 1856, the son of James Hadley, a professor of Greek at Yale. He graduated from Yale College, Class of 1876, studied at the University of Berlin, and returned to Yale in 1879 as a tutor. Interested in the history and science of railroad transportation, he was associate editor of the Railroad Gazette, and lectured on railroad administration at Yale, 1883-1886; was acting professor of political economy in the Sheffield Scientific School, 1890-1891, and chair of political economy, 1891-1899; and served as the first dean of the Graduate School, 1892-1895. He was president of Yale University from 1899 to 1921. Hadley died in 1930.

Helen Harrison Morris (1881-1939) was the daughter of Luzon Buritt Morris, governor of Connecticut from 1894-1896, and Eugenia Laura Morris. She graduated from Vassar College in 1883 and, in 1935, she was awarded an honorary degree of Master of Arts from Yale University, where a graduate women's dormitory was named for her in 1958. She was married to Arthur Twining Hadley.

Emily Eugenia Morris was the sister of Helen Harrison Morris. She graduated from Vassar College in 1890 and lived in New Haven, Connecticut.

Morris Hadley (1894-1979), son of Arthur T. and Helen H. Hadley, graduated from Yale University, Class of 1916. He received his M.A., 1940, and LL.D., 1963, from Yale and a LL.D., 1965, from the University of Nevada. In 1918, he was in charge of the Brigade School of Fire at Camp Devens, Massachusetts, having reached the rank of major in the United States Army. He joined the law firm of Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy in 1929. Hadley served on the Yale Corporation, 1940-1962; was deputy director of the Office of Facts and Figures in Washington, 1941-1942, was a trustee of the Russell Sage Foundation; and sat on the board of trustees of the Pierpont Morgan Library and the New York Public Library, serving the latter as president, 1943-1958.

Scope and Contents

The Hadley Family Papers is a collection of personal, professional and family materials concerning three generations of the Hadley family of New Haven, Connecticut.

The collection consists mainly of James Hadley's professional writings, Hadley household account books, and memorabilia.

The papers primarily document the activities of James Hadley, a professor of Greek and Yale College, and include his personal and professional writings and notes. A manuscript diary covers, sporadically, part of the period Hadley spent in graduate study, his early career as a member of the Yale faculty, and his courtship and marriage. The diary is, for the most part, a detailed record of his daily life at Yale, and of the conversations and personalities around him. Yale Press published an edition of the diary in 1951; a typescript prepared for the publication by Hadley's granddaughter, Laura (Hadley) Moseley, is also in the collection.

Most of the James Hadley correspondence consists of letters and drafts written by him. Several letters and memoranda concern the affairs of Yale College. Other letters discuss matters of linguistics, philology, and publications; correspondents include Theodore D. Woolsey, Edmund Clarence Stedman, William W. Goodwin, and New Haven Mayor William Fitch. The letters show Hadley as a concerned and conscientious teacher. Besides a couple of letters to students, there are seven addressed to parents, mostly on matters of discipline; one of these (1856 April 9) describes the Yale riot of March 10, and another (1858 March 23) discusses a shooting incident.

The decisions for college class disputes (in folders 9-11), even more than the letters, show Hadley the instructor at work. In his preface to Hadley's Essays Philological and Critical (1873), William D. Whitney explains that the decisions represent Hadley's opinions on particular questions, written out in preparation for the weekly junior class disputes at which he presided. The topics, some of which were debated more than once over the years, include: "Do present circumstances [1848 February] render improbable the permanent existence of the Union?", "Are the abilities of the sexes equal?", "Was Brutus justifiable in killing Caesar?", "Should the right of suffrage be extended to our colored population?", "Do spectres or ghosts ever appear?", "Was Aaron Burr a traitor?", and "Are popular superstitions more favorable to the cultivation of poetry than enlightened opinions?" The decisions have been arranged chronologically; the earliest were written when Hadley was still a student, and a participant in the disputes. There are some rather cryptic memoranda, which may be preliminary drafts for essays or speeches rather than decisions.

The papers contain some of Hadley's professional writings, but these manuscripts and notes were left in considerable disarray at the time of his death, and some manuscripts and parts of manuscripts appear to be missing. Of the three books, only his Greek Grammar was published in his life-time. The Introduction to Roman Law was edited by Theodore D. Woolsey, and most of the other writings were gone over by William D. Whitney when he and Hadley's family were selecting the papers published in Essays Philological and Critical. Some of the papers bear Whitney's annotations, and they are arranged in accordance with his lists. The notes are arranged roughly by subject.

James Hadley's wife, Anne Loring (Twining) Hadley, is represented in the papers by a series of household account books, begun the year after their marriage and continued for more than forty years.

Arthur Twining Hadley, son of James and Anne Hadley, was president of Yale University from 1899 to 1921, and his papers are part of the Presidential Records in the Yale Archives (YRG 2-A-13). The Hadley Family Papers contain some materials concerning the death of Arthur Twining Hadley. These include letters to his widow, Helen Harrison (Morris) Hadley, from Charles Seymour and others, regarding the printing of Seymour's memorial address; letters from James R. Angell, George Parmly Day, and Andrew Keogh concerning the establishment of the Arthur Twining Hadley Memorial Fund for the Yale University Library; and resolutions of sympathy adopted by organizations of which Hadley was a member.

Helen Hadley's papers also include a series of household account books, begun before her marriage; notes from a Sunday school course; and a scrapbook of printed memorabilia and photographs which she put together for her children, Morris, Hamilton, and Laura Hadley.

The papers also contain correspondence of the Hadley and Morris families, including letters to Helen Hadley Morris from her mother, Eugenia Morris, her siblings and children, and Arthur Twining Hadley before and after their marriage.

The papers conclude with two folders of World War I materials compiled by Morris Hadley while he was assigned to an Intelligence section in Germany beginning in December 1918. The bulk of the material is mimeographed copies of the Third Army's daily intelligence summaries. Other papers include manuscript and mimeographed reports and notes on food, coal, and other economic matters, and a copy of the army's rules for inhabitants of the occupied area.

Accession 2009-M-036: Additional material, 1770–1972 (inclusive), 1870–1930 (bulk)

The accession documents the personal lives of the family members. James Hadley and his wife, Anne Loring Twining, are primarily represented through correspondence. The personal correspondence of Arthur Twining Hadley was probably maintained by Yale University staff while he was president and is routine in nature, documenting organizational memberships, house matters, speaking invitations, and social events. There are twenty-two folders of his writings; it is unknown which of them were published.

Helen Morris Hadley, wife of Arthur Twining Hadley, wrote papers for the New Haven Saturday Morning Club. Club members, all women, researched and wrote on various topics of interest. The topics of Helen's papers range from social customs in Berlin and New Haven; family travels; and interesting individuals she met; to life on the family farm in Newtown, Connecticut (Snake Rock Farm). Her incoming correspondence primarily concerns her social life, but there are letters from friends and Yale students discussing the outbreak of World War I. Her outgoing correspondence, in handwriting that is difficult to decipher, mostly concerns her children and family life.

Morris Hadley, son of Arthur and Helen, attended Groton, Yale University, and Harvard University Law School, after which he fought in World War I. His outgoing correspondence provides an in-depth look at his daily life at the three educational institutions, including his experiences at military instruction camps while at Yale. He also wrote at length about his experiences in the Army during World War I, although he did not reach the front until ten days before the war ended. Correspondence between Morris and Katherine Blodgett prior to their marriage in 1919 provides an intimate portrait of their courtship.

The Hadley Family photograph albums, which sometimes include memorabilia in the form of poems, sketches, and school report cards, primarily document life at family homes, travels, and social activities.

Copyright for materials in this collection created by James Hadley, Anne Loring Twining Hadley, Arthur Twining Hadley, and Helen Harrison Morris Hadley is in the public domain. Copyright for materials in Accession 2009-M-036 created by Morris Hadley and Katherine Blodgett Hadley has been transferred to Yale University Library. The copyright status of other collection materials is unknown.

The accession is arranged by generation within the Hadley family, beginning with James Hadley and ending with Morris Hadley and his wife, Katherine Blodgett Hadley.
