College from, 1885 to 1911 and at the University of London from 1911 to 1924. In 1924 he joined the faculty of Harvard University as professor of philosophy, becoming emeritus professor in 1936.

Scope and Contents

The primary purpose of this register is to provide the researcher with a convenient guide to collections of manuscripts in the Sterling Memorial Library which, owing to their content or provenance, fall into the social science category, but which are too small to warrant separate descriptions.

For the present purpose "Social Science" has been broadly defined to include all those disciplines which were historically derived from Moral Philosophy in the mid-nineteenth century, together with certain related subject areas. Thus, the Philosophy and Social Science Manuscripts Group includes manuscripts relating to psychology, philosophy, education, law, economics, and political science. This group does not include manuscripts related to the humanities and the fine arts nor to those disciplines which derived from Natural Philosophy; those have been described separately in the guides to the Humanities and Fine Arts Manuscripts Group and the Natural Science Manuscripts Group respectively.

It should be re-emphasized that there are a number of separate large collections relating to philosophy and the social sciences that have been separately described and are not included in this register.

Consult the Chief Research Archivist, Manuscripts and Archives, for further information about all of these collections.

Arrangement

Arranged alphabetically by individuals whose papers are included in the collection.

Collection Contents

CHARLES A. A. BENNETT

This group of papers consists almost entirely of notes on various philosophical topics, some of which were apparently taken while Bennett was a graduate student; others appear to be notes for his own lectures. There are also a few lectures on the philosophy of religion, two items of correspondence, copies of examinations, a few students' papers and some printed material relating to the first world war.

It should be noted that originally this material was mixed with, and so mistakenly identified as, that of Wilbur Urban, Bennett's successor at Yale (q.v.). That material which is dated or signed is almost certainly Bennett's, but it is possible that some of Urban's papers remain with Bennett's.

WILBUR M. URBAN

These papers contain a large number of papers written for Urban by his students, mainly on ethics and on Kant. There are also two items of correspondence and a book manuscript, God and the Historians and Other Studies in the Philosophy of History, written by Urban in 1949.

It should be noted that this material was originally mixed with the materials of Charles A. A. Bennett, Urban's predecessor at Yale (q.v.). Although the two groups of material have been separated as far as possible, some of Urban's material may still be in Bennett's papers.

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART

These papers consist of a series of scrapbooks concerning various aspects of elections and voting behavior with the exception of one scrapbook pertaining to political corruption and some notes about the aldermen of New Haven. The material from the scrapbooks includes clippings from newspapers, magazines and books; pamphlets; and notes, papers, and reports by students. Among the student papers there are a few letters from Hart to students about their papers. Also in the papers are letters from Edward Gaylord Bourne (q.v.) concerning his book, Spain in America, published in the American Nation series which Hart edited.
