Biographical / Historical

Kevin Roche John Dinkeloo and Associates in Hamden, Connecticut was a direct outgrowth of Eero Saarinen and Associates, which was originally established in 1950. When Eero Saarinen died in September 1961, the practice was taken over by Kevin Roche and John Dinkeloo with Kevin Roche resolving the remaining design issues of the twelve major projects on which Mr. Saarinen had been working at the time of his death. These included the Dulles International Airport, the St. Louis Gateway Arch, the CBS Headquarters and the TWA building in New York. In 1966 the firm became Kevin Roche John Dinkeloo and Associates (KRJDA).

KRJDA completed over 200 projects throughout the United States, Europe, and Asia. Kevin Roche, recipient of the Pritzker Prize in 1982, designed a variety of institutional and corporate projects including 38 corporate headquarters, three hotel/apartment buildings, eight museums, numerous research facilities, theaters, schools, factories, performing arts centers, houses and the Central Park Zoo in New York. From 1967 to 2015, he was the architect for the master plan and expansion of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, designing all of its new wings and installing many of its collections. Source: Kevin Roche John Dinkeloo and Associates. More information on the firm can be found at www.krjda.com

Color has always played an extremely important part of our process and if a specific color couldn't be found commercially, one was mixed in house and specified on our jobs for custom matching. The color samples in this box were all mixed and painted on chip board by people working in the office. The first letter in the numbering system designates the color family; W for whites, B for Blues, etc. The letter is then followed by a number for the color. In the various job files you may note references to a number such as W08 or B05, referring to the enclosed samples.
