Biographical / Historical

The Connecticut Public Health Association (C.P.H.A.) is a private organization for individuals with professional or personal interest in public health and for state-wide organizations in health-related fields. It was founded in 1974 through a merger of the Connecticut Public Health Association and the Connecticut Health League (C.H.L.). The new organization was originally named the Connecticut Health Association, Inc., but reverted to the name of the larger of the two parent organizations in 1978. The original C.P.H.A. was founded in 1916 to protect and promote public health and safety in Connecticut. The C.H.L. developed out of a C.P.H.A. committee appointed to explore the need for a council to coordinate state health agencies. The C.H.L. was formed in 1951.

Scope and Contents

The records document the history of the Connecticut Public Health Association (1974) and its predecessors. Most materials date from 1946-1993 and consist of correspondence, minutes, bylaws, constitutions, newsletters, officers' reports, and memoranda relating to the business of the organizations. These papers form part of the Contemporary Medical Care and Health Policy Collection.

Arrangement

The materials are arranged by organization name.

Accession 1995-M-128: Additional material, 1974-1993

The bulk of the material dates from 1978-1993 and consists of minutes of meetings, committee reports, newsletters, and financial statements of the Connecticut Public Health Association (CPHA). There is also some material of the CPHA from 1950-1974, and a small quantity of material which dates from the time of the merger of the CPHA and the Connecticut Health League and from the first years of the association when it was known as the Connecticut Health Association.

The files are arranged by year and then by type of material, as received from the Connecticut Public Health Association.
