Biographical / Historical

Horace Walpole (1717-1797) was an author, politician, antiquarian, patron of the arts, and prolific letter writer. He was the youngest son of Sir Robert Walpole, England's first prime minister, and moved in a circle comprised of the most influential figures in both the social and political worlds of 18th-century England. He wrote histories, fiction, plays, verse, essays, political pieces, and art catalogues, and compiled notebooks covering topics such as "Anecdotes of Painting in England," "The Catalogue of Engravers who have been born, or resided in England," "Catalogue of the Royal and Noble Authors of England, Scotland, and Ireland," and "Essay on Modern Gardening." Walpole was the author of Historic Doubts on the Life and Reign of King Richard the Third and Memoirs of the Last Ten Years of the Reign of George II. His fiction included the first gothic novel, The Castle of Otranto; the fantasy Hieroglyphic Tales; the play "Mysterious Mother"; and Fugitive Pieces in Verse and Prose.

Walpole founded the Strawberry Hill Press, which published Thomas Gray's Odes, at his gothic revival home Strawberry Hill, in Twickenham. He spent the better part of his long life building a significant collection of art and objects which he displayed at Strawberry Hill, and extensively documented in two editions of his self-published catalogue A Description of the Villa of Mr. Horace Walpole.

Scope and Contents

Citations to copies in the two standard editions -- Toynbee and the Yale Edition -- are provided where appropriate. See Bibliography in Administrative Information for complete citation to these works.

Correspondence is arranged in subseries, one for each of Horace Walpole's correspondents. Within each subseries correspondence is arranged chronologically with letters to and from Horace Walpole interfiled. Undated letters are filed at the end.

OS ("old style") and NS ("new style"). Letters preceding the change of calendar in 1752 are arranged in the sequence in which they were actually written, allowing eleven days' difference between "new style" letters from the Continent, and "old style" letters from England.
