Biographical / Historical

Chester Bowles was born on April 5, 1901 in Springfield, Massachusetts. He graduated from Yale University in 1924 (B.S.) and established the advertising firm of Benton and Bowles, with William Benton, in 1929. Bowles served in the Office of Price Administration in Connecticut and at the federal level. He was named a Special Assistant to the Secretary General of the United Nations and was elected governor of Connecticut (1948-1950). Bowles served as ambassador to India (1951-1953, 1963-1969) and was elected to the U.S. Congress (1959-1960). He also served as a foreign policy advisor to Adlai Stevenson and John F. Kennedy, and held the positions of Under Secretary for Political Affairs and Special Representative and Advisor on Africa, Asia, and Latin American Affairs (1960-1961). Bowles lectured and wrote extensively on national and foreign political topics and published his memoirs in 1971.

Scope and Contents

The Chester Bowles Papers, consisting of 186 feet of correspondence, speeches, writings, photographs, oral history interviews, and various other types of material, record Bowles' long career in public service. Though the papers do contain some photographs and memorabilia from Bowles' childhood, college years, and from the period of his association with the advertising firm of Benton and Bowles, there is no correspondence or other important documentation before 1942, when Bowles assumed the position of Connecticut State Tire Rationing Administrator. After that date, the papers illuminate Bowles' varied roles as state and federal administrator, politician, diplomat, publicist and as author and consultant. The papers shed much light on a wide range of subjects, including U.S. politics, economic policy, foreign policy, U.S. foreign aid and development policies, India, U.S. relations with India, Connecticut politics, and activities of American organizations and individuals in the field of liberal politics, civil rights and other causes. There is correspondence with six U.S. Presidents, Congressmen, federal and state government officials, Prime Ministers and other officials of foreign governments, press people, and leaders of liberal U.S. groups, as well as with constituents and admirers in the general public.

The papers have been divided into eight chronological parts, each of which includes several series. There is also one unprocessed part:

Part I. 1942 - 1946 July

Part II. 1946 July - 1951 October

Part III. 1951 October - 1953 March

Part IV. 1953 April - 1958 December

Part V. 1959 January - 1960 December

Part VI. 1961 January - 1963 June

Part VII. 1963 July - 1969 May

Part VIII. Unprocessed

1969 June on

The dates of each part are somewhat arbitrary, but are defined, more or less, by the specific position Bowles held at the time. For example, Part I ends on Bowles' resignation as director of the Office of Economic Stabilization and Part IV begins when Bowles returned from his first tour of duty as ambassador to India. The parts are clearly delineated in the chronology that follows (p.4). Each part includes correspondence, speeches, writings, and newspaper clippings and may also include memoranda and subject files. For each of these eight parts there is a separate register containing a more detailed description and a folder list. Since correspondence with a particular individual may appear in any or all of the eight parts, a cumulative name index has been prepared to facilitate the location of that person's correspondence.

Certain types of material overlap the chronological divisions or require special handling. For these reasons a Part IX has been created. This part, which includes photographs and memorabilia; personal and financial papers; information files; and audio and video tapes, will prove valuable even to the researcher only interested in a particular time period. The special collection of oral history interviews are in this section, as are Bowles' personal diaries. For a more detailed description and folder list, see the register for Part IX.

The Chester Bowles Papers in the Yale University Library do not include all papers that ever passed through Bowles' hands. Researchers will undoubtedly find the National Archives a useful source for documentation of Bowles' roles in OPA; files still at the State Department will, when available, prove invaluable for his years with the Kennedy Administration, as well as for his two periods as ambassador to India. Similarly, the Connecticut State Library in Hartford has important supplements to Yale's holdings on Bowles' term as Governor of Connecticut; it also has some records relating to the Connecticut Office of Price Administration.

For related papers in Manuscripts and Archives, see the following collections: Dorothy Stebbins Bowles Papers; Philip Hall Coombs Papers; James G. Rogers, Jr. Papers; Commission on State Government Organization, 1949-1950, in Connecticut Miscellaneous Manuscripts Collection

ACCESSION note:

The Chester Bowles Papers became the property of Manuscripts and Archives, Yale University Library, in February 1973, through Bowles' instrument of gift. Up until that time the papers had been in Bowles' possession at the family home in Essex, Connecticut. The organization of the papers was completed in December 1974, at which time they became open for research. Only a limited number of items are restricted for the time being, and these almost entirely as sensitive personal material. Jean Joyce, a long-time associate of Mr. Bowles, served as consultant in reviewing the collection. Joyce also prepared the oral history interviews with Bowles' colleagues, which are being included in his papers. Any additional accessions of papers will be integrated into the existing organization.

PART I -- 1942 January - 1946 July 15

Chester Bowles began his career of public service as Connecticut State Tire Rationing Administrator (January 1942 - March 1942), Connecticut State Rationing Administrator and Director of the Connecticut State Office of Price Administration (March 1942 - July 1943). After serving as general manager to the Office of Price Administration (OPA) in Washington for several months, he became national OPA Administrator in October 1943. In early 1946 he was named director of the Office of Economic Stabilization (OES), February 1946 - July 1, 1946. He resigned after Congress, in June 1946, failed to pass the strong legislation he felt was necessary to maintain effective price controls.

The successful conduct of World War II on the home front hinged in significant part on control of war-induced inflation and the equitable rationing of scarce commodities. The determination of price and rationing policies served as a focus of controversy and negotiation among the several emergency war agencies, the older bureaucracies, the political representatives in Congress, and business, farm and labor groups.

The Chester Bowles Papers, Part I, though only a fragment of the correspondence that passed through Bowles' hands, reveal much of the story of the organization of the national OPA and of local price and rationing boards; of the attempts to secure public understanding, acceptance and compliance with controls; of the bureaucratic and political conflicts in Washington; and of the recurring issue of securing Congressional support.

The papers are arranged in four series: Correspondence; Speeches, Statements, and Writings; OPA Reports and Printed Material; Appointment Calendars, Clippings, Scrapbooks.

PART II -- July 15 - 1951 October 20

During this period Bowles participated in a wide variety of public activities. Although he did not secure his party's nomination in 1946, in 1948 he won the governorship in a race against Republican James C. Shannon. He lost, narrowly, his 1950 bid for reelection against John D. Lodge. His brief tenure as Governor featured several struggles to implement such liberal reforms as the reorganization of Connecticut's chaotic state government, reform of the state budget, initiation of a state-wide housing program, and enlarged state assistance to local communities for building new schools.

Throughout these years Bowles immersed himself in Democratic politics at the state and national level. His most notable excursion into national politics came in 1948, when he added his voice to the so-called "dump-Truman" movement of disaffected Democrats. At the same time Bowles' frequent service to the United Nations -- as UNESCO delegate, as consultant to Secretary-General Trygve Lie, and as international chairman of the UN Children's Appeal -- deepened his interest in foreign affairs.

Throughout the 1946-1951 period Bowles was a prolific writer and spoke frequently, aside from his activities as Governor. He participated in the organization and politics of liberal groups, and was an early supporter of the Americans for Democratic Action. In September 1951, he was appointed by President Truman as Ambassador to India and Nepal and reached India in October 1951 where Part III begins.

The papers are organized in six series: General Correspondence; Correspondence on Political Appointments and Job Applications; Writings, Speeches, and News Releases; Special Subjects (in two subseries: 1948 and 1950 Gubernatorial Campaigns; and Governor's Information Files); Biographical Profiles, Lists, and Appointments and Schedules; Clippings.

In addition, see Part IX for any photographs or memorabilia, tapes (audio and video), discs, films, etc. from this period. Also, in Manuscripts and Archives, in the Connecticut Collection, see the Commission on State Government Organization, 1949-1950. The Connecticut State Library in Hartford contains some of Bowles' papers during his period as Governor; the material consists mostly of the files of state agencies, boards and commissions. An appendix at the end of Part II lists these files. There are also records of some state agencies dating from this period in the Connecticut State Library.

PART III -- 1951 October 20 - 1953 March 22

In September 1951, Bowles was nominated ambassador to India and Nepal by President Truman. His appointment was confirmed in spite of strong opposition led by Senator Robert Taft. This register covers his term in India from his arrival with his family in New Delhi on October 20, 1951 until his departure in March 1953. Correspondence about Bowles' appointment and confirmation, letters of congratulation, and some correspondence about recruitment of personnel for India may be found in Part II (1946-1951).

As ambassador, Bowles was involved not only in the traditional diplomatic functions, but with the many new and growing activities of the U.S. Mission in New Delhi. Under his administration, the work of the Embassy, the Technical Cooperation Administration, and the United States Information Service was closely coordinated.

Part III indeed provides a rich record on the first major U.S. economic assistance program for underdeveloped nations. In Bowles' first few weeks as ambassador, India became the first underdeveloped nation to receive a significant grant or loan under the new "Point Four" program. A Technical Cooperation Administration (TCA) had rapidly to be set up and staffed. A top priority job to be done was planning the most effective use of U.S. aid funds in collaboration with Indian officials who were then preparing India's own first five-year development program.

Bowles' deep concern with, economic development for India as a basis for its future economic and political stability and his close working relationship with, high Indian officials in the selection of significant development programs to be funded by U.S. aid are well documented here. His correspondence with U.S. Government and Indian officials is extensive on the initiation and potential of these programs, and on the need for congressional and public support. Part III also documents Bowles' belief in the importance of the United States Information Service (USIS) and his efforts to expand its activities and staff in India and Nepal.

Bowles' informal and personal approach to diplomacy received wide publicity and he encouraged all mission personnel, including spouses and children, to learn Indian languages and customs. In his staffing of mission posts, he sought capable officers and made strenuous efforts to recruit black officers. He believed that the presence of black staff members would help counteract the negative impression Asians had of America's treatment of its racial minorities.

Bowles sometimes found himself in the anomalous position of being pressured and attacked both by conservatives in the U.S. and by Communists in India. As a liberal in the McCarthy era, Bowles was criticized at home for not taking a stronger stand against Communism and for his strong advocacy of foreign aid. In India, on the other hand, he was often attacked by the Communist press. One Indian Communist, R.K. Karanjia, the editor of Blitz, even attempted to discredit him by forging a letter in Bowles' name.

Bowles kept in close touch with Democratic politics at home during the 1952 political conventions and campaigns. When Brien McMahon, the Democratic senator from Connecticut, died in July 1952, there was pressure on Bowles to resign his post and seek the Democratic nomination for McMahon's seat, or at least return home and work for the party in the campaign, Bowles, however, believed his work in India was more important.

With Eisenhower's victory in 1952, Bowles was hopeful that American foreign policy would not change drastically and that he would be asked to stay on under the new administration. Eisenhower, however, appointed George V. Allen to replace him, and Bowles left India in March 1953. Bowles' book, Ambassador's Report, is a detailed account of his term in India.

The papers in Part III give a fairly complete record of Bowles' activities during this period. Much of the material relates to his post as Ambassador, such as his files of U.S. Mission memoranda and reports, and his correspondence with Indian and American policymakers on India and Asia. In addition, there is much on his personal and political interests in the U.S. for example, on national and Connecticut Democratic politics. The papers are arranged in four series:

I. U.S. and International Correspondence

1. General Correspondence

2. U.S. Government Correspondence

II. Indian and Nepal Correspondence

1. General Correspondence

2. U.S. Mission to India and Nepal

III. Writings, Speeches, Statements and News Releases

IV. Clippings

In addition to the material in this part, see Part IX for photographs, memorabilia, audio tapes, video tapes, and movie films from this period.

note on the Organization of the Correspondence in Part III;

The arrangement of the correspondence files in two series follows the system used in Bowles' office in New Delhi; one series for correspondence outside of India and the second for local (India and Nepal) correspondence whether with Indian or U.S. officials or other correspondents. In the U.S. Mission sub-series is Bowles' correspondence, in the form of memoranda and reports, with U.S. officials in India and Nepal, on USIS and TCA, as well as on Embassy matters.

note: Bowles' office staff had a complicated filing system which included the placing of duplicate carbon copies of outgoing letters in more than one file in an attempt to cross-reference by subject. The symbols "X" and "CR" indicate such duplicate copies. Occasionally there may be other notations, underlinings, notes, and circled numbers Which were probably made when research was done for Bowles' books and articles.

PART IV -- 1953 April - 1958 December

Bowles, after leaving India at the end of March, 1953, returned to his home in Essex, Connecticut, with no specific job responsibilities. Yet the years between 1953 and 1958, which are covered in Part IV, were particularly active. Bowles set himself the immediate task of helping the American public understand the problems of Asia, and in the months after his return he worked on Ambassador's Report, a personal account of the family's experiences in and impressions of India and Asia. Its success led to a demand for Bowles to lecture in countless appearances across the country.

Between 1955 and 1958, Bowles published four more books: The New Dimensions of Peace (1955), Africa's Challenge to America (1956), American Politics in a Revolutionary World (1956) and Ideas, People and Peace (1958). These books and his trips to Africa, Asia and Russia earned for Bowles a reputation as an expert in foreign affairs, as an advocate of foreign assistance programs (which he considered an "investment in the cause of peace"), and as a strong critic of the Eisenhower Administration's foreign policy.

During this period he became increasingly involved in state and national politics. In 1954 Bowles was pressed by friends to run for governor of Connecticut against the man who had defeated him in 1950, John Lodge. John Bailey and other Connecticut Democratic leaders were convinced that Bowles could win, and Bowles himself was eager to run. At this same time Adlai Stevenson had held out the possibility of Bowles joining his administration, perhaps in the State Department, if Stevenson ran successfully for the presidency in 1956. Bowles decided to take his chances with Stevenson - a decision he later realized had been a mistake.

From 1954 to the 1956 election Bowles worked actively to help Stevenson, and Part IV has considerable documentation on this association. Bowles was part of an informal, liberal brain trust for Stevenson, organized by Thomas Finletter. The group, which included Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., and Averell Harriman, sought to feed Stevenson position papers on important issues. Later Bowles attempted to get Douglas MacArthur, who was disgruntled with Eisenhower and his administration, to vocally support Stevenson. During the campaign itself, Bowles submitted memoranda on campaign strategy and foreign policy, wrote draft speeches for Stevenson, and did some campaigning himself.

With Stevenson's defeat, Bowles once again turned his thoughts to Connecticut politics. Since Connecticut already had a popular Democratic governor, Abraham Ribicoff, Bowles decided to seek the party nomination for the Senate seat held by William A. Purtell. It was an ill-fated race. William Benton, Bowles' former business partner whom he had appointed to fill a vacant Senate seat in 1949, also wanted to run and felt that he had a better chance than Bowles to win the support of John Bailey and Ribicoff. In mid-September a third candidate appeared when Thomas Dodd made a formal declaration of his intention to seek the nomination. Bowles viewed Dodd, a conservative Democrat and a Catholic, as the real challenge; some behind Dodd thought he might stand a better chance against the Catholic Purtell.

Bowles, on the basis of a private Harris Poll which showed Benton running a poor third, was certain Benton posed no threat; and he remained convinced that Bailey and Ribicoff could not support Dodd. Yet the Democratic state convention in June found close associates of Bailey's campaigning vigorously for Dodd; and Bowles' emissaries could not convince Benton to withdraw from the race.

Dodd won the nomination on the first ballot. To bind up party wounds the Democratic leadership asked Bowles to run for the Second District Congressional seat. Though tempted to refuse, Bowles felt that he had been out of public life too long, and that he could use the Congressional seat as a platform to speak out on national issues. He launched an ambitious campaign devoting one week to each of the state senatorial districts. In a series of coffee parties, rallies, and weekly newspaper columns, he discussed the issues important to the district, unemployment, new industry, housing and government spending. The Bowles campaign was effective and Bowles was sent to Congress by a healthy majority. With Bowles' move to Washington, Part IV ends and Part V begins.

The papers of Part IV are divided into five series: Correspondence; Speeches, Statements, and Writings; Campaigns for Senatorial Nomination and for Congress; Schedules, Itineraries, Appointment Books; Newspaper Clippings.

PART V -- 1959 January - 1960 December

Bowles spent two years (1959-1960) in Washington not only as a Congressman representing Connecticut's Second District, but as an ever more active and involved supporter of John F. Kennedy for President. These are the years that are covered in Part V.

Congressman Bowles was especially fortunate in drawing a competent staff composed of Thomas L. Hughes, James C. Thomson, Jr., Patricia Durand, and Robert Downer into his Washington office. Bowles hoped for and received assignments to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, where he worked hard on foreign policy issues giving special attention to the Mutual Security Act. Among the issues of more direct concern to his District, Bowles sponsored the Area Redevelopment Act to alleviate conditions of unemployment and underemployment in economically depressed areas, and introduced legislation on housing and social security. He used the Congress as a podium to speak out on racial discrimination, national priorities, and inflation. He joined the Democratic Study Group, an organization of key liberal Democratic Congressmen.

In the summer of 1959 Bowles published a book, The Coming Political Breakthrough, in which he discussed the approaching election and the issues of critical importance to America's future. Bowles' strong opinions in the book, in Congress, and in numerous public appearances throughout the country brought him increasing prominence.

In October, 1959, John F. Kennedy met with Bowles to discuss the Senator's presidential candidacy and his desire to have Bowles serve as his foreign policy advisor. After consulting first with Adlai Stevenson and learning that Stevenson had no intention of seeking the presidential nomination a third time, Bowles accepted Kennedy's offer. His only condition was that he not be asked to campaign directly against Stevenson or Humphrey. Announcement of Bowles' appointment by Kennedy was made in February, 1960, roughly a month after Kennedy had declared his candidacy. Though Bowles' designation was foreign policy advisor, in fact his most important function was to help Kennedy win the support of the liberal wing of the party, which had so far withheld its endorsement of Kennedy.

Late in February, Bowles was asked by Paul Butler, head of the Democratic National Committee, to chair the Democratic platform committee for the coming presidential convention. After a series of preliminary regional hearings to allow citizens a chance to propose their ideas, Bowles was able to put together a specific, forthright platform, which included a strong civil rights plank, and push it through the committee with surprisingly little difficulty. In addition, he convinced the Democratic National Committee to forego the usual word-for-word reading of the platform in favor of a documentary film, geared to the T.V. audience, on the party's accomplishments, coupled with a reading of a shortened form of the platform.

Kennedy's nomination at the convention was a disappointment to several of Bowles' supporters who believed the "grass roots were rooting for Bowles," and had organized Bowles-for-President Clubs, chiefly in the Midwest and on the West Coast. Bowles had discouraged these groups, asserting that Kennedy was the strongest candidate.

With Kennedy nominated, Bowles had to decide about his own seat in the Congress. If Kennedy won, Bowles was virtually assured of an important role in the new administration. After debating the possibilities, including his prospects if Kennedy were defeated, Bowles withdrew from the Connecticut race.

In the months between the convention and the election, Bowles kept up a heavy schedule of campaign speeches for the national ticket. He also met with Secretary of State Christian Herter for the briefings on critical foreign policy situations, traditionally held for presidential candidates, and submitted speech material to the Kennedy campaign staff.

With Kennedy's election, Washington was flooded with rumors of possible Kennedy appointees. Bowles, along with Senator William J. Fulbright and Adlai Stevenson, were frequently mentioned as choices for the post of Secretary of State. Dean Rusk, however, was the eventual appointee. Bowles was selected as his Under Secretary for Political Affairs. With Bowles' move into the State Department at the end of 1960, Part V ends.

Part V is organized in four series: Correspondence; Speeches, Statements and Writings; Special Subjects; Clippings.

PART VI -- 1961 January - 1963 June

Followers were disappointed when Kennedy chose Dean Rusk to be Secretary of State, but Bowles saw great potential for shaping a more forward-looking U.S. foreign policy in the offered post of Under Secretary for Political Affairs. He had no reason to doubt that he could work well with Rusk whom he had known as president of the Rockefeller Foundation while Bowles was a trustee.

Bowles and Rusk moved into the State Department at the end of December, 1960, which is when Part VI begins. Bowles felt the first requirement for an enlightened new foreign policy was to find high-level talent to head up the embassies abroad and State Department bureaus in Washington. Bowles succeeded in enlisting a distinguished group of people to serve in U.S. Missions, particularly in the developing nations of Africa, Asia, and Latin America. Bowles was especially proud of securing, among others, Edwin O. Reischauer to serve in Japan and George Kennan to become ambassador to Yugoslavia. Bowles also helped promote an important redefinition of the role of a U.S. ambassador as overseer and coordinator of all U.S. government activities in his country of assignment.

Several crises occurred in the first months of the new administration: the Bay of Pigs, Laos, Soviet resumption of nuclear testing, and civil strife in the Dominican Republic. On the question of the Bay of Pigs, Bowles opposed the invasion and similarly opposed any retaliatory measures after its stunning failure. The press learned of Bowles' opposition, to the sharp annoyance of the Kennedys.

The Bowles-Rusk relationship never successfully worked out, and many detailed letters and memoranda from Bowles to Rusk (see State Department correspondence) bear witness to this deteriorating situation. By July 1961, rumors were circulating in Washington that Bowles would resign or be reassigned. Rusk did in fact offer Bowles an ambassadorial post in Latin America, an offer which Bowles declined. Kennedy, however, affirmed his desire to keep Bowles in the Administration and the rumors were temporarily quieted. Returning to "work as usual" he left for Africa, the Middle East and Asia to conduct regional conferences of U.S. Ambassadors in those areas, the first of a series of such conferences initiated by Bowles.

On the weekend of Thanksgiving, Bowles was suddenly called back from his home in Connecticut to Washington where Rusk informed him that the State Department was being reorganized. George Ball was to replace Bowles as Under Secretary and Bowles was asked to replace Averell Harriman as a roving ambassador. Bowles' new title would be President's Special Representative and Advisor on Asian, African, and Latin American Affairs. The announcement to the press emphasized Bowles' new office in the White House complex and the raise in salary and rank. But Bowles was dubious about the new position and his ability to get the President's attention.

During the next year Bowles traveled widely in Africa, Asia, and Latin America, meeting with the Shah of Iran, Nasser, Haile Selassie, Nehru, Ayub Khan, and Prince Sihanouk, among others. He inspected rural and community development projects and AID-sponsored programs, visited with Peace Corps volunteers, and saw the results of the African independence movement. Often he sent suggestions back to the President in detailed memoranda.

But, in December 1962, Bowles transmitted to Kennedy a letter of resignation. He felt strongly that his position had placed him outside the policy-making structure and he was exasperated with the lack of progress on or even high level attention to a positive policy geared to the developing nations. Kennedy asked Bowles to withhold his resignation until they could meet again. In early January, Kennedy met with Bowles with a new proposal; John Kenneth Galbraith was about to leave as ambassador to India and Kennedy hoped Bowles would agree to replace him. Before accepting the offer, Bowles sent Kennedy a memo outlining his thoughts on policies toward India and its relations with the rest of Asia. With Kennedy's concurrence on these policies, he felt able to accept the offer.

With Bowles' departure for India in July of 1963, this part of the Papers ends and Part VII begins.

Part VI consists of three series: Correspondence; Speeches, Statements and Writings; Clippings.

Note: The researcher should also consult Part IX for additional materials related to this period, including photographs, diaries, and oral histories. The researcher might also be interested in a Yale senior essay (Spring, 1974) on Bowles during this period. See: Stephen Heintz, Frustrations at Foggy Bottom: Chester Bowles as Under Secretary of State, January - November 1961, in Miscellaneous Mss., No. 170.

PART VII -- 1963 Jul - 1969 May

Bowles' second term as Ambassador to India began in July, 1963. This is the beginning date for Part VII. Bowles thought that he would be in India no more than two years, but his tour lasted until the spring of 1969. On arrival, the Bowles' moved into the recently-built ambassadorial residence, Roosevelt House, but found this highly stylized architecture ill-suited to their more informal mode of life. As during Bowles' first ambassadorship, they moved into the pleasant home-like bungalow at Ratendon Road. They used Roosevelt House as a place for official entertaining and hospitality functions for members of the Mission and the Indian people.

During his tenure in New Delhi, Bowles brought all programs of the U.S. Mission in India under his direction. He oversaw the functioning not only of the Embassy and consulates, but also of the U.S. Information Service, the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development, and the military and intelligence missions. Bowles again made numerous attempts to get Senators and Congressmen to come to India to see firsthand what had been and what needed to be done in developing nations like India. When he first arrived, a top priority was negotiations between the U.S. and India to develop an agreement for substantial U.S. military assistance to India. Kennedy's death in November 1963, followed by that of Prime Minister Nehru only six months later, plus resistance in U.S. State and Defense Departments, delayed this agreement.

Learning to adjust to India's changing leadership was a special aspect of this period. Jawaharlal Nehru, aging and ill on Bowles' arrival, died in May 1964. Lal Bahadur Shastri, Nehru's successor, had been in office less than two years when he too died in 1966. His death brought yet another new Prime Minister, Indira Gandhi, Nehru's daughter. Similarly the assassination of Kennedy and the subsequent efforts to ascertain the Johnson Administration's views and assure Johnson's positive stance on India were critical issues during Bowles' second ambassadorship.

In addition to continuing problems of economic development, India was confronted in this period with major problems which demanded immediate U.S. attention. In September 1965, Pakistan launched an attack in Kashmir using tanks and other war material supplied by the U.S. In 1965 and 1966 two successive droughts brought severe food shortages. The U.S., with its then abundant food surpluses, was able to help, but President Johnson attempted to use U.S. grain for political leverage. Despite repeated pleas by Bowles and U.S. friends of India, food shipments were delayed until there was a virtual "ship-to-mouth" schedule of deliveries.

Two other events brought diplomatic and Indo-U.S. relations problems to the U.S. Mission. One was the 1967 public exposure in the U.S. of C.I.A. funding of U.S. educational and scholarly activities in India and elsewhere. The second was the sudden appearance of Svetlana Allilueva, Joseph Stalin's daughter, at the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi in March 1967, where she sought U.S. assistance to remain in India or at least to prevent her return to the Soviet Union. Bowles' efforts to aid Svetlana prevent her return to the Soviet Union. Bowles' efforts to aid Svetlana ended with her eventual settlement in the U.S.

The papers for this period are an important source of information on the changing aspects of Indo-U.S. relations; on Bowles' guidance of the U.S. Mission in New Delhi; and also on the change of administration in the U.S. following the assassination of John Kennedy, the 1964 U.S. presidential election, the ever-widening war in Vietnam, Bowles' mission to Prince Sihanouk in Cambodia in 1968 to discuss North Vietnamese military violations of the Cambodia border, and the 1968 U.S. presidential election. The papers also record the onset of Bowles' affliction with Parkinson's disease and his efforts to control it.

The papers in this Part (VII) are smaller in quantity than one would expect for a six-year period. It is possible that a large quantity of correspondence and other documentation that passed through the Ambassador's hands was left in the Embassy files in New Delhi on Bowles' departure.

Part VII is arranged in four series: Correspondence; Speeches, Statements and Writings; Special Subjects including U.S. Mission in India, India, Other Countries and Areas; and Clippings.

PART VIII -- 1969 June -

Part VIII is composed of papers dating from Bowles' return from India in the spring of 1969. While most of Bowles' public correspondence for 1969 and 1970 is included here, this part is incomplete and unprocessed and will remain so until Bowles' death when any additional papers can be processed with what is already in Manuscripts and Archives.

Although Bowles had left India and throughout most of 1969 and 1970 was almost totally occupied with preparing his autobiography Promises to Keep, he kept in close touch with India and U.S. foreign policy, particularly in regard to South and Southeast Asia. See especially his correspondence with President Nixon, Henry Kissinger, Secretary of State William Rogers, General William C. Westmoreland, Dean Rusk and Lucius Battle.

The papers in this section contain drafts, and correspondence and critiques of various stages of the manuscripts for the autobiography, Promises to Keep. Also included are drafts, correspondence and the final manuscript of Bowles' book, "Mission to India," published in India in 1974. Copies of both books, as published, have been incorporated with these files.

Part IX is arranged in five series as follows: Photographs and Memorabilia; Informational Files; Diaries and Oral Histories; Personal and Financial Papers; and Audio Tapes, Video Tapes, Movies, Phonograph Records.

Collection Contents

Part I, I: Correspondence, 1942-1946

(14 boxes)

The correspondence series is arranged alphabetically by name of the correspondent. Correspondents with whom Bowles had significant exchanges in terms of quantity and/or quality have been individually listed in this register; the remaining correspondence has been placed in general letter folders. The correspondence between Bowles and OPA or OES officials is arranged in two ways. Routine correspondence is filed under "U.S. Government," in folders marked "OPA File" or "OES File." Correspondence with other OPA-OES personnel is filed by name, the individuals being identified in the folder listing as "OPA official" or "OPA consultant."

The James G. Rogers, Jr., folders are the best single source on OPA operations. Folders for Douglas J. Bennet, Sr., Robert R. R. Brooks, James Brownlee, Bice Clemow, Marcella Eastman, Richard H. Field, and Donald H. Wallace are also useful. OPA-OES matters are also discussed in Bowles' correspondence with Presidents Truman and Roosevelt, the White House staff, Congressmen, other government officials (James F. Byrnes, John Snyder) and private citizens (James Patton, Clarence Francis) and organizations (Committee on Economic Development). On the politics and day-to-day problems of OPA, the correspondence with Connecticut's Senator Francis Maloney, and Democratic National Chairman, Robert Hannegan, is especially rich. The J. Francis Smith correspondence traces an interesting case study of a Connecticut businessman alienated by OPA policies.

The Office of Economic Stabilization and OPA continued after July 1946, the termination date of Part I of the Bowles papers. Further correspondence on these agencies and on their post war problems and eventual demise will be found in Part II. See especially the Everett W. Reimer and Roderick Riley correspondence on OPA. The Robert R. R. Brooks correspondence, also in Part II, contains an interesting memorandum on the history of OPA. (Note: The researcher should also consult the James G. Rogers, Jr. Papers in Manuscripts and Archives for his correspondence concerning the recruitment of people from the advertising field to staff OPA.

Bowles' position, convictions, and aspirations encouraged him to range beyond price control issues. Deeply concerned with the expected problems of post-war conversion, Bowles suggested President Roosevelt's famous State of the Union address setting forth the "Economic Bill of Rights" and sought to commit Roosevelt, Truman and the Congress to a policy of government intervention in the economy to secure full employment and economic growth. Bowles' desire to prevent confrontation with Russia, to expand foreign trade, and to recognize the needs of the emerging colonial areas clearly foreshadowed his dissenting position on foreign policy in the 1950's and 1960's. The White House, Roosevelt, Samuel Rosenman and Truman folders shed light on Bowles' official contribution to policy on these issues. The Marcella Eastman, Beneta Cox, and especially the William Benton correspondence reflect the wide range of Bowles' political and professional interests and some aspects of his personal life. Other valuable personal commentary is expressed in correspondence with Alfred Bingham.

At the end of the series there are folders of form letters, mailing lists, correspondence relating to Bowles' travel and expense accounts, and correspondence of others. The researcher will notice occasional photocopies of letters from the National Archives in the files. These copies, were made by Bowles or a member of his staff for Bowles' use in writing his memoirs, Promises to Keep.

Part I, II: Speeches, Statements and Writings, 1942-1946(9 boxes)*

Bowles, used, his speeches, and writings as a vehicle to secure the cooperation of the American public in rationing and price control. He was a tireless user of the radio and his weekly radio speeches constitute a valuable chronicle of OPA policies. In addition, through his speeches and articles, and his book, Tomorrow Without Fear, Bowles set forth many of the opinions on domestic and foreign policy issues which he had formed during the war. The series is organized in three sub-series:

1. Speeches
2. Statements
3. Writings

1. Speeches: radio talks as well as formal speeches. The folders may contain drafts, notes, and final copies. The radio speeches are filed first and are arranged in chronological order, together with a list of stations carrying the talks. The rest of the speeches are filed following the radio talks. They, too, are arranged chronologically.

2. Statements: Bowles' press conferences, press releases, testimony before Congressional committees and various statements and form letters sent in multiple copy to Congress. The press conferences and releases are arranged together in chronological order, as is the Congressional material.

3. Writings: materials for Bowles' articles, letters to the editor, and his book, Tomorrow Without Fear. The articles and letters to the editor are arranged together in chronological order. Folders may include drafts, and printed copies. (Additional articles will be found in the scrapbooks in Series IV). Materials for Tomorrow Without Fear follow. Drafts are arranged by chapter in the printed copy. (A printed copy of the book has been kept with the papers). notes, drafts with criticism, illustrations, galleys, and promotional material are also included. For discussion of the publication of the book see correspondence (Series I) with Simon and Schuster.

Part I, III: OPA Reports and Printed Material, 1940-1947(3 boxes)*

Series III is composed of reports and other types of printed material relating to OPA. Though some of this material dates from the time Bowles headed OPA, for the most part the reports and printed material in this series were produced after Bowles' resignation and hence technically after the termination date for Part I of the Bowles Papers. The Series includes a nearly complete set of the Historical Reports on War Administration: Office of Price Administration. (This material duplicates items already in the collections of the Public Documents Room, Sterling Memorial Library.)

Part II, I: General Correspondence, 1946-1951

Although, this series contains little official Bowles correspondence as Governor it is a rich source for his political activities while out of office. There is extensive correspondence on the "dump-Truman" movement, Bowles' criticism of Truman's foreign and domestic policies, his work for the United Nations, and his strong connection with the liberal wing of the Democratic Party, with members of the Americans for Democratic Action, and with organized labor. There is also much material on Connecticut state politics. Note, for example, files on labor organizations, on political leaders like John Bailey and William Patterson, and on pollster Elmo Roper. Through Secretary of State George C. Marshall, through William Benton (for a time Assistant Secretary of State), and other officials (note the correspondence from Frank Howley of the American Military Government in Berlin), Bowles kept in touch with national and foreign policy.

Bowles maintained his correspondence with former and active OPA personnel as they moved into new positions after the end of OPA in 1946-1947. Examples include the files of R.R.R. Brooks, Bice Clemow, Philip Coombs, Max McCullough, Everett Reimer, Roderick Riley (especially on the death of OPA), U.S. Government: Department of Commerce, Economic Stabilization Agency, and Donald Wallace, among others.

General Correspondence also includes correspondence about Bowles' nomination and confirmation as Ambassador to India and Nepal, and important correspondence about recruiting personnel for India, as well as letters of congratulation.

The scant amount of Bowles' gubernatorial correspondence consists chiefly of small Connecticut state agencies file, a Connecticut mayors file, and some correspondence with officials and heads of state commissions filed by name. For correspondence on the state housing program, see the files of Philip Coombs, Bernard Loshbough, the Syracuse Housing Authority, Carroll Shanks, Nathan Straus, U.S. Government: Office of Housing Expediter, and, Housing and Home Finance Agency. For information on the National Guard, see U.S. Government: Department of Defense. On civil rights, see NAACP, Leverett Saltonstall, U.S. Government: Department of Defense, and Frances Williams.

The files of Charles Sawyer, Oscar Ewing, Maurice Tobin, and U.S. Government: General Services Administration provide material on development and employment. For correspondence on the Commission on State Government Organization, see the files of Carter Atkins, James G. Rogers, Jr., and Frederick Shuckman.

In the Connecticut State Library's small collection of Bowles' gubernatorial papers (composed chiefly of files of state agencies, boards and commissions), the files of the State Housing Authority in particular appear to be substantial and include correspondence of the State Housing Authority Administrator, Bernard Loshbough, reports, and press releases. For a listing of these files, see the Appendix at the end of Part II.

The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by name of the individual or organization. "Correspondence of Others," multiple recipient letters and a few unidentified letters are filed at the end of the alphabetical listing. The correspondence appears to be incomplete and has some gaps, especially for Bowles' 1949-1950 period as governor. The correspondence about political appointments and job applications, in Part II, Series II., may contain additional correspondence with individuals active in Connecticut politics, which has not always been cross-referenced.

Part II, II: Correspondence on Political Appointments and Job Applications, 1948-1950

(6 boxes)

This series illuminates an important part of the role of a state governor. It contains correspondence recommending individuals for positions on state boards and commissions, jobs in state agencies, judgeships on several levels, and other types of appointments, such as the U.S. Senate seat in 1949. The correspondence is arranged in four main categories:

1. General Recommendations
2. State Agencies, Boards, and Commissions
3. Judgeships
4. Other appointments (U.S. Senator and miscellaneous posts)

There is some correspondence with individuals also contained in Series V, General Correspondence, which is not always cross-referenced. Correspondence within the folders is unarranged.

Part II, III: Writings, Speeches, News Releases, 1946-1951(8 boxes)*

This series is divided into three subseries:

Writings

Speeches

News Releases

The material within each subseries is arranged chronologically. Undated and unidentified material is filed at the end of each subseries or at the end of the year when only the year is known. The researcher should see Series V for correspondence about the publication of writings and arrangements for speeches.

1) Writings 1946-1951: notes, drafts, final copies, published copies and reprints of articles and statements, as well as letters to the editors of magazines and newspapers. Also forewords to books, as, for example, to Arthur Goodfriend's The Only War We Seek (1951), an introduction to Saving American Capitalism, by Seymour Harris, Bowles and others (1948), and a chapter on housing for the book, Two Thirds of A Nation, by Nathan Straus (1951). Statements for general release to the press (such as those for the United Nations Children's Appeal, 1948 Jan - Feb) are filed in subseries 3 (News Releases).

2) Speeches 1946-1941: notes, drafts, final copies, and copies and excerpts in the form of duplicate news releases, of Bowles' speeches, radio broadcasts and interviews, as well as statements before legislative bodies, including messages to the Connecticut General Assembly. note: there may also be brief excerpts, from speeches in news releases describing Bowles' appearances in subseries 3. There are also some tapes and discs from this period in Part IX, many from the campaigns of 1948 and 1950.

3) News Releases 1946-1950: chiefly news releases while Bowles was governor, 1949-Jan 1951, but also some statements to the press before he became governor, especially during the campaign of 1948.

In addition there are also two volumes containing copies of releases, during 1949 and 1950. The index in the 1949 volume covers the whole year, while the 1950 index covers only the January to June period. The loose copies of releases run from January to December of each year, but are not always complete. Between the volumes and the loose copies, however, most of the releases can be found.

Some of the releases are statements in the form of mimeographic copies of correspondence which were probably released to the press and sent out as multiple mailings. In most cases there are also copies of the correspondence in Series V.

There are miscellaneous notes and schedules for releases in the file of Joseph P. Lyford, Bowles' press secretary, in Series V.

Part II, IV: Special Subjects, 1948-1951(8 boxes)*

This series is divided into two subseries:

The 1948 and 1950 Gubernatorial Campaigns

Governor's Information Files

1) 1948 and 1950 Gubernatorial Campaigns: miscellaneous correspondence and memoranda on campaign activities and finances, financial records, background research material, printed matter, handouts, songs and advertisements used in the campaigns, as well as election results and analyses. Much of the material is from the "Bowles for Governor Club" and "Women's Independent Committee for Bowles" in 1950, as well as from the Democratic State Central Committee and other sources.

There are scripts for radio spots for the 1950 campaign, and for both campaigns there are recordings and discs, tapes of radio advertisements, speeches and debates which are in Part IX.

note: See also the correspondence of Elmo Roper, Series V, for surveys done for Bowles' campaigns. Also, in Part II, Series II., see the Speeches and News Releases for copies and excerpts from Bowles' campaign speeches, broadcasts, and statements to the press. In Folio 2, there are a few campaign posters of Bowles, Truman and of 1948 vice-presidential candidate Alben W. Barkley.

2) Governor's Information Files: material about state programs and other subjects of interest for the gubernatorial period; arranged alphabetically by subject. Included are pamphlets, reports and memoranda on subjects such as the state budget, the Connecticut State Housing Authority, the Commission on State Government Organization, as well as extra copies of Bowles' messages to the General Assembly.

Part III I: U.S. and International Correspondence, 1951-1953

(16 boxes)

This series contains correspondence with, individuals and organizations in the U.S. and in foreign countries other than India and Nepal. It is divided into two subseries:

1) General Correspondence

2) U.S. 'Government Correspondence

1) General Correspondence: Bowles' correspondence, filed alphabetically by correspondent, with individuals and organizations in the U.S. and in countries other than India and Nepal, except for U.S. Government officials. Included is the considerable correspondence he conducted with members of Congress to enlarge their understanding of India's needs and importance as he saw them. He wrote frequently to such Senators as Hubert Humphrey, Brien McMahon, William Benton, Owen Brewster, Paul Douglas, Jacob Javits, A.S Mike Monroney, H. Alexander Smith, John Sparkman and Alexander Wiley; in the House, to Congressmen Emanuel Celler, Thurmond Chatham, Christian Herter, Walter Judd, John McCormack, John McGuire, and Abraham Ribicoff.

Bowles similarly sought support from members of the American press, and the General Correspondence contains his correspondence with editors and journalists such as Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Marquis Childs, Norman Cousins, Fleur Cowles, Gardner Cowles, John Cowles, James, Derieux, Herbert Elliston, John Fischer, Ben Hibbs, Robert C. Hartnett, Marguerite Higgins, Walter Lippmann, Henry Luce, Max Lerner, Lester Markel, Elmo Roper, Arthur Hays Sulzberger and James Wechsler. Labor leaders with whom Bowles corresponded included Philip Murray, William Green, Mitchell Sviridoff, James Patton, Jacob Potofsky, Victor Reuther, Walter Reuther, and Joseph Rourke.

Bowles kept abreast of Connecticut politics through his correspondence with John Bailey, Richard Lee, John Golden, Winifred McDonald, and William Renton, Brien McMahon and Abraham Ribicoff.

The files of William Benton and of Philip Coombs (who until mid - 1952 was in the U.S. Government and acted as an informal liason between Bowles and U.S. Government officials and members of Congress) are especially rich on many aspects of national and state politics and foreign policy. Other notable correspondents include Adlai Stevenson, Nelson Rockefeller, Eleanor Roosevelt, Walter White, Eliot Janeway, Yehudi Menuhin and Paul Hoffman.

Correspondence with some individuals (such as Paul Appleby, Philip Coombs, Leigh Danenberg, and Albert Mayer) who visited India as consultants under the auspices of the U.S. or Indian governments or of private foundations, is filed in this series. Also included is correspondence with Indian officials and students in the U.S. In addition, there is correspondence with political groups such as the Americans for Democratic Action, with charitable and religious groups, and with foundations. Some of these U.S. based organizations, notably the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, were closely involved in Indian development programs and had branches in India. Correspondence with these branch offices is filed in Part III, Series II., Subseries 1.

A number of Bowles' personal reports and memoranda are filed at the end of this subseries.

2) "U.S. Government Correspondence: Bowles' correspondence with U.S. government officials, in the U.S. and in U.S. missions abroad other than India and Nepal. The largest amount of correspondence is with State Department officials in Washington, and U.S. ambassadors and other U.S. personnel abroad. There is also correspondence with Presidents Truman and Eisenhower, as well as with members of their staffs, and with, officials, of other executive agencies. Bowles' personal reports and memoranda, are filed at the end of General Correspondence.

Much of Bowles' correspondence is with officials in the State Department who were directly concerned with Indian and Asian affairs. His correspondence with Donald D. Kennedy, Director of the Office of South Asian Affairs, is probably the most extensive single file on policies, technical assistance programs, personnel and budgets. Bowles did not limit himself to matters of official business in his correspondence with Kennedy, and sometimes confided to Kennedy his views on politics in the U.S.

For correspondence with officials in the Technical Cooperation Administration (TCA} in Washington, see for example, the files of Stanley Andrews, Jonathan Bingham, Haldore Hanson, and Eric Johnstone, among others. Some of the officials in the U.S. Information Agency (USIA) in Washington with whom Bowles corresponded are: Edward Barrett, G. Edward Clark, Wilson Compton, Ernest Fisk, S. Shepard. Jones, Howland Sargeant and Egbert White, In addition, there is correspondence with some officials in the Mutual Security Agency, including W. Averell Harriman, Ray Johnson, Amicus Most, Roland Renne, Russell Smith and Theodore Tannenwald, Jr. Also of interest is the correspondence of John D. Hickerson on Kashmir and that of Donald Heath in Saigon. The file of Philip Coombs in Part III, Series I., Subseries 1 (General Correspondence) contains many significant reports on the development and staffing of the Indian aid program.

Part III II: India and Nepal Correspondence, 1951-1953

(18 boxes)

India and Nepal Correspondence consists of correspondence with individuals and organizations located in India and Nepal. It is divided into two subseries:

1) General Correspondence

2) U.S. Mission in India and Nepal

Bowles was Ambassador to both India and Nepal, but the material in this series is generally about India. Since there was no embassy in Nepal at that time, technical cooperation activities and U.S. information programs for Nepal were administered through the U.S. Mission in New Delhi. For material specifically on Nepal, see: "Nepal, Government of" under General Correspondence, in this series; and the U.S. Mission files here, specifically the "Embassy political section", "TCA Nepal" and "USIS Nepal" folders.

1). General Correspondence Bowles' correspondence with officials of the Indian and Nepalese governments, American businessmen, clergy, journalists, and other foreigners working in India or Nepal. While the bulk of Bowles' correspondence with Indian nationals remained in the Mission when Bowles left India, what was considered his most important Indian correspondence was kept as part of this file. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by correspondent.

Correspondence with members of foreign diplomatic missions in New Delhi is filed under the heading, "Diplomatic Missions in Delhi," and then alphabetically by country. Correspondence with the Prime Minister or officials in the executive departments of the Indian government (for example, Jawaharlal Nehru or Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit) is filed under the heading "Government of India." Members of the Indian Parliament, and state and local officials are filed by name. The correspondence of Nepalese officials is filed under the heading, "Nepal, government of."

The General Correspondence also contains correspondence with the Ford foundation and Rockefeller Foundation offices in India, as well as the U.S. Educational foundation in India, which often worked cooperatively on development programs with the U.S. Mission.

The file on the Karaka-Karanjia forgery case documents the attempt by Indian editors, one pro-Communist and the other anti-Communist, to discredit Bowles by publishing a forged letter. Of interest also are letters received from Americans reporting on their experiences in India, which are filed under the writer's name. Since Bowles used these letters in writing Ambassador's Report, the complete list of writers will be found with book material in Part IV, Box 178, folder 1040.

note: For monthly commentaries prepared for Bowles on Indian correspondence received by the Embassy but not kept as part of Bowles' files, see: Box 103, folder 389, in the U.S. Mission-Ambassador's Office, files.

2) U.S. Mission in India and Nepal: Bowles' correspondence, in the form of memoranda and reports, with the U.S. Mission in New Delhi and Kathmandu, Nepal. It reflects his involvement in all phases of U.S. activity in both countries. The U.S. Mission comprised three branches: the Embassy, the Technical Cooperation Administration (TCA), and the U.S. Information Service (USIS), whose functions were coordinated by Bowles. Internal Mission memoranda which Bowles received or sent, are organized under these three headings;

A. The Embassy: Materials relating to the various offices or "sections" of the Embassy, as they are called, are arranged alphabetically as: "Ambassador's Office", "Economic Section", "Political Section", etc. The "Ambassador's Office" files contain memoranda between Bowles and his office staff, including his special assistant Edward J. Logue, who remained in India for several months, after Bowles left in March 1953, arranging for the disposition of Bowles' files. (For the Logue-Bowles correspondence after Bowles left India see the Logue folder listed in Part IV, General Correspondence.) The "Ambassador's Office" files also contain items such as memoranda of Bowles' conversations while Ambassador, appointment books, trip files, mailing lists, and a few folders of background reference material. In addition, this section contains Mrs. Bowles' records concerning household and entertaining expenses, such as guest lists, memoranda and Mrs. Bowles' appointment books.

In the files of the "Political Section" are reports on India, Kashmir, and Southeast Asia, as well as a folder of memoranda about Nepal. After September 1952, Jean Curran of the Political Section coordinated correspondence between U.S. officials in Nepal and Washington, and prepared summary memoranda on Nepal.

B. Technical Cooperation Administration: Indo-U.S. official agreements on the aid program, budget estimates, and significant documents recording the establishment of the TCA program which rapidly became one of the largest and most varied of all U.S. foreign economic development programs. The files for Clifford Willson, the Country Director of TCA and his two deputy directors, Henry Niles for administration and Bernard E. Loshbough for the Community Development Projects program supplement these documents, as do TCA files such as the agricultural section, the audio-visual program, the community development projects. The weekly reports from the TCA Legal Counsel to Washington give summaries of developments in the TCA program.

The TCA Nepal Country Director, Paul Rose, sometimes reported on political developments in Nepal as well as on the TCA program there since there was no U.S. Embassy in Nepal.

For TCA photographs of India and Nepal, see Part IX.

C. The United States Information Service: Bowles made creative use of the U.S.I.S. publications such as the American Reporter, libraries, films, radio and of Indian press contacts to promote greater knowledge of the U.S., the U.S. aid program and U.S. foreign policy. U.S.I.S. also collected and analyzed Indian press comment and Communist propaganda in India.

A small U.S.I.S. program in Nepal was conducted through the U.S.I.S. library in Kathmandu, since there was not yet a formal U.S.I.S. office there. The correspondence includes some comments on Nepalese politics as well as on U.S.I.S. matters.

note 1: notes and numbers on some items in the U.S. Mission files may correspond to notes and lists filed with material for Ambassador's Report in Part IV, particularly the letters of TCA field technicians reporting on their experiences.

note 2: For names of U.S. personnel, by title or section, see the following list.

Part IV, I: Correspondence, 1953-1958

Part IV, Series I. is arranged alphabetically by name of the correspondent. The researcher will find this correspondence particularly full and candid, including exchanges with American and foreign government officials as well as with American and Indian friends and "fans". Since there are literally hundreds of correspondents listed in the register that follows, it is useful here to describe the correspondence by the subjects of Bowles' concern during this period.

For a good overview of Bowles' activities during this period, one should consult the Jean Joyce correspondence. Since Joyce, a long time associate, was in India at the time, the correspondence is particularly detailed and frank. Bowles also had a particularly close relationship with several staff members and friends who helped him with almost every phase of his work and who advised him on important decisions. These include: Abraham Chayes, Harris Wofford, James C. Thomson, Jr., Thomas L. Hughes, Edward Logue, Douglas Bennet, Sr., and James G. Rogers, Jr.

For correspondence on the Democratic party one should consult the folders of party leaders such as Hubert Humphrey, Mike Mansfield, and Lyndon Johnson as well as the folders for the Democratic National Committee and the Committee's advisory council on which Bowles served. For the Stevenson campaign in particular, see correspondence with: Dean Acheson, Archibald Alexander, Harry Ashmore, William Blair, Jr., Benjamin Cohen, Thomas, Finletter, Averell Harriman, Newton Minnow, Paul Nitze, Eugene Rostow, Walt Rostow, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., Adlai Stevenson, Willard Wirtz, and Wilson Wyatt.

Leigh Dannenberg's correspondence provides an overview of the Connecticut political situation in 1954, 1956, and 1958. The correspondence of John Bailey, the Connecticut Democratic State Central Committee and Thomas, Dodd is fairly limited. But for the campaign of 1958, there is much in the correspondence with William Benton, Richard Lee, John Golden, Mitchell Sviridoff, Eugene Rostow, Philip Coombs, and others. For organizers of Bowles' own campaign, see correspondence with Johan Smertenko, Ken Wynne, Harry Howroyd, Eric Stevenson, Robert Sussler, Peter Jones and the National Committee for an Effective Congress, as well as the friends and aides listed above.

Other correspondence of particular interest includes that with Frances Williams on civil rights, James Patton and G. Mennen Williams on national politics and domestic issues, Stanislas Ostrorog on Asian affairs, and with the Rockefeller Brothers Fund on their ambitious project to define the "national purpose."

At the end of the correspondence is a small section labelled multiple recipient mailings. This section is composed of important memoranda and position papers which Bowles intended for more than one person. It includes papers on such topics as agricultural surpluses and Democratic foreign policy as well as letters to family and friends from his trips abroad with Mrs. Bowles.

After this section there are three folders labelled "Letters from Indian Students in the U.S., 1953." When Bowles left India he wrote letters to Indian students studying in American universities to solicit their impressions of life in the U.S., their response to American foreign policy, and their ideas on how Indo-American relations could be improved. He said that he planned to use these letters in the book he was writing, i.e. Ambassador's Report. About 50 letters were received in response. The letters contain interesting observations on American family life, racial discrimination, social life, and the Korean War as well as suggestions for bettering American understanding of Indians and the policies of the Indian government. The letters are arranged alphabetically by name of the sender. Copies of Bowles' letters to the Indian students will be found in Part III ( U.S. and International General Correspondence, folder 223, "Indian Students,").

At the very end of the correspondence there are several folders of invitations received by Bowles with his reply. These invitations are arranged alphabetically by name of institution or committee chairperson. These invitations are generally those which were declined, and thus represents only a fragment of the invitations Bowles received during this period. Many more will be found in the General Correspondence, where most invitations that were accepted, together with all correspondence concerning the planning for an event, are filed.

Part IV, II: Speeches, Statements and Writings, 1953-1958

Part IV, Series II. consists of Bowles' speeches, statements, and writings during this time. The series is divided into three sub-series:

- 1) Speeches and Statements.
- 2) Writings (excluding books)
- 3) Books

1) Speeches and Statements: speeches, interviews, radio and television appearances, press conferences, and testimony before congressional committees, arranged chronologically by date of delivery. Undated items are filed at the end. For any particular speech, a folder may contain drafts, outlines, notes, the reading copy and printed copies. In addition there may be recordings of some speeches. See part IX for a list of these audio tapes, video tapes, movies, and discs. This sub-series does not represent all speeches Bowles made during this period, since he spoke extemporaneously on many occasions. The researcher interested in a more complete outline of Bowles' speaking engagements should see the correspondence with the Foreign Policy Association, National Concert and Artists Corporation, and the Connecticut Democratic State Central Committee; all these groups arranged speaking engagements for him. One should also see the schedules and appointment books in Part IV, Series IV.

2) Writings (excluding books): articles, proposed articles, and letters to the editor, arranged chronologically (undated items are filed at the end), with, published items filed by date of appearance, and proposed items filed by approximate date of writing. A folder for a particular article might contain outlines, notes, drafts, printed copies, and reprints. Researchers should check the correspondence under the name of the magazine or newspaper for information about the publication of a particular article. Additional writings in the form of columns used for publicity in the Bowles campaign for Congress will be found in Part IV, Series III.

3) Books: During this period Bowles wrote five books. Bowles' first book after his return from India was Ambassador's Report. Bowles wrote up preliminary notes which he sent on to Harris Wofford and Abram Chayes, who then wrote first drafts. The work progressed rapidly, with the final manuscript being sent to the printers in the fall of 1953. This section contains preliminary notes, drafts arranged by chapter, the complete manuscript as sent to the printer, some galleys with revisions, and reviews. There is also a copy of the printed book kept with the papers. Since Bowles based this book on his experiences in India, the background material is in the files for Part III. Other important memoranda updating Bowles on various Indian programs since his departure will be found in the general correspondence under Evelyn Hersey, Jean Joyce, Edward Logue, and Bernard Loshbough. For specific details on the structuring and printing of the book see the correspondence of Chayes, Wofford, Harper and Brothers, and Bowles' literary agent, George Bye. There were also foreign editions of Ambassador's Report. For correspondence on the British edition see correspondence with Victor Gollancz, Ltd.

Bowles, had ideas for his second book, New Dimensions of Peace, at the same time that he was working on Ambassador's Report, and at one point, considered combining all his ideas in one book. The section on New Dimensions of Peace included the preliminary notes, and outlines which date ca. 1954 April - June. Real work started on the book in September, 1954, when Bowles enlisted the aid of Thomas. L. Hughes and, later, Abram Chayes and Harris Wofford. During the winter, Bowles travelled to Africa and India leaving much of the preliminary drafting to his aides. It is important to look at the correspondence of Hughes, Chayes, and Wofford to understand the development of the book since the chapters went through many revisions. In this section there is a complete first draft, followed by various section drafts, with, a complete final draft at the end. Since the chapter order changed, the section drafts are organized by their order in the printed copy. (A printed copy of the book has been kept with the papers.) For comments on drafts see correspondence with Raphael R. Abramovitch, Herbert Brucker, William Henderson, Max T. Millikan, Philip E. Mosely, James G. Rogers, Jr., Walt Rostow, and Arthur Schlesinger. Jr. Reviews of the book are in this section. For information on the publication see the correspondence with Harper and Brothers for the American edition and with the Bodley Head for the British edition.

Bowles' next two books were the printed copies of lectures, Africa's Challenge to America, based on a series of three lectures given at the University of California, Berkeley, in March, 1956, and American Politics in a Revolutionary World based on the three Godkin lectures delivered at Harvard in April, 1956. For each there are the drafts and final copies for each lecture as well as the revisions necessary for publication. For comments on the drafts of the Berkeley lectures see correspondence with Sidney Hertzberg. There are also reviews of each book. Printed copies of these books are kept with the papers. On the publication of the books see the correspondence with the University of California Press and Harvard University Press respectively.

Ideas, People and Peace, Bowles' fifth, book, was begun in the summer of 1957 as a special feature for the 1958 Encyclopedia Britannica Book of the year. From the beginning Bowles, intended to use this piece, "The New Challenge," as the basis for a new book. The manuscripts for both "The New Challenge", and Ideas People and Peace are included in this section, the drafts, for "The New Challenge", coming first and the revisions, involved in the publication of the book following. The drafts are arranged by section title. There are also proof sheets with pictures and reviews in this section. A printed copy of the book is kept with the papers. For information on the book format, see the correspondence with Peter T. Jones. On the publication of the book see the correspondence with Harper and Brothers.

Part IV, III: Campaigns for Senatorial Nomination and Congress, 1958

(4 boxes)

Part IV, Series III. is a subject file dealing with Bowles' unsuccessful attempt to gain the Democratic nomination for Senator from Connecticut and with his successful campaign for the House of Representatives against Horace Seely-Brown, in Connecticut's Second Congressional District. Materials in this section include memoranda on campaign strategy, publicity, press releases, background material on opponents and on the Congressional District, lists, schedules, and financial records. Some of the background materials seem to be from the files of Douglas J. Bennet, Sr., Bowles' friend who ran against Seely-Brown in the 1956 election. Other sources of information on the campaign include the correspondence in Part IV, Series I. and the clippings in Part IV, Series V. An important memorandum of Bowles' reminiscences on why he lost the senatorial nomination will be found with the diaries and oral histories in Part IX.

Part V, I: Correspondence, 1959-1960

(27 boxes)

The Correspondence series is divided into three subseries;

- 1) Selected
- 2) Constituent
- 3) General

These divisions follow the organization of the files as they were in the Bowles Congressional office in Washington.

1) Selected Correspondence: The correspondence selected by Bowles' office staff as "VIP" mail. Correspondence with each individual is separately listed in alphabetical order along with the number of incoming and outgoing letters. Besides correspondence and enclosures a file might contain copies of speeches, articles, press releases and campaign publicity produced by the particular individual listed. Correspondents include congressmen, members of the executive branch, personal friends, members of the press, foreign ambassadors and other officials of foreign government, aides, family members, state governors, Democratic National Committee members, and institutions and organizations with which Bowles was affiliated.

The correspondence with congressmen tends to be disappointing, with many routine letters transmitting copies of speeches, acknowledging receipt of press releases and congratulating members on successful campaigns or recent public appearances. There is, however, a substantial file of material for the Democratic Study Group. Other notable exceptions include the correspondence with Senator William Fulbright on mutual security legislation and relations with Pakistan, and with Speaker Sam Rayburn. The correspondence with Thomas E. Morgan, the chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, is particularly good for discussions of the role of the committee and current problems in foreign affairs.

Bowles corresponded with others on the foreign policy plank in the Democratic platform and on foreign policy issues that arose during the Kennedy campaign. On the foreign policy plank, see the correspondence with Dean Acheson and Senator Fulbright. Discussions of Quemoy and Matsu, Cuba, and Khrushchev's visit to the United States can be found in the correspondence with Archibald Cox and John F. Kennedy. The correspondence with Secretary of State Christian Herter is especially good on these topics since it contains memoranda of Bowles' briefings with the Secretary. The Paul Hoffman and David Williams correspondence contains discussions of the United Nations and there are many letters on disarmament from Norman Thomas. The correspondence with Mikhail Menshikov contains two memoranda of Bowles' conversations with the Russian ambassador. Others whose correspondence deals with foreign relations include: Jonathan Bingham, Dwight D. Eisenhower, G. Mennen Williams, and George K.C. Yeh, the Chinese ambassador to the U.S. For Bowles' ideas on the tasks facing the Kennedy administration in the area of foreign affairs, see his correspondence with Dean Rusk.

The bulk of suggestions for the Democratic platform came from the general public and these letters are found in Part V, Series III. There are, however, some suggestions from the "VIP"s in this correspondence. On the civil rights plank see correspondence with Abram Chayes, Martin Luther King, Eleanor Roosevelt, Frances Williams and Harris Wofford. On the economics sections see the correspondence with John Kenneth Galbraith and Leon Keyserling, and on disarmament see the file of Ralph Lapp. For a more general discussion of the platform and its presentation, see correspondence with Paul Butler.

For discussions of Democratic party politics see the files of the Democratic National Committee Advisory Council and Charles Tyroler. Hubert Humphrey and Adlai Stevenson both mention presidential candidacies, and the Stuart Symington and Lyndon Johnson folders contain some of their campaign literature. For Bowles' own role in the Kennedy campaign see correspondence with Abram Chayes, Fred Holborn, John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Walt Rostow, Eugene Rostow, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., Theodore Sorenson, and Harris Wofford. The R. Sargeant Shriver and Harris Wofford correspondence contains an especially explicit discussion of Bowles' inability to campaign against Hubert Humphrey in the Wisconsin primary.

Correspondence with Luis Muñoz-Marín contains discussions of the problems within the Democratic party of Puerto Rico.

The correspondence also reflects Bowles' continued association with union leaders James Patton, Walter Reuther, and Victor Reuther, and with press corps members such as James Reston, Lester Markel, Walter Lippmann, and Ralph McGill, and with friends from India, Amrit Kaur and Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit. Reflected in the correspondence also is Bowles' work with various institutions and foundations as he served on the boards of the African-American Institute, the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, the Institute of International Education, and the Rockefeller Foundation. There are interesting letters from Bowles' son, Sam, and his wife, on their experiences teaching in Nigeria.

2) Constituent Correspondence: routine correspondence with Bowles' own constituents and with persons around the country seeking his influence or assistance. The bulk of the correspondence is carbon copies of outgoing letters. Because some of the correspondence contains details relating to personal problems with immigrant visas, social security payments, military service, and the like, this correspondence has all been restricted. The files remain in their original order.

3) General Correspondence: routine correspondence from the general public. None of the selected "VIP" correspondents of subseries 1 are represented in this section. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically, and consists primarily of letters from job applicants and volunteers, congratulatory messages on appointments, correspondence about book publications, successful public appearances, support for the candidacy of various contenders, requests for copies of speeches, articles on the platform, helpful hints on campaign tactics, and suggestions for appointees in the new administration. At the end of the section there are several folders of mailing lists.

Not all public opinion mail, however, is filed in this section. Public reaction to various speeches and articles is filed with the particular speech or article. Likewise, suggestions for the Democratic platform are filed with the other platform materials in Part V, Series III. Since this filing system was created by the Bowles staff it is impossible to guarantee that there are not areas of overlap or other exceptions in this arrangement.

Part V, II: Speeches, Statements and Writings, 1959-1960(21 boxes)*

Part V, Series II is divided into six subseries:

- 1) Speeches
- 2) Articles, Letters to the Editor
- 3) Washington Report
- 4) Washington Newsletter
- 5) Press Releases
- 6) The Coming Political Breakthrough

1) Speeches: An apparently full record of Bowles' numerous public appearances during his two years in Congress. Besides speeches to organizations and formal lectures there are speeches on the floor of Congress, television and radio appearances, and testimony before congressional committees. A file for a particular speech may include outlines, reference material, notes, drafts, clippings, printed copies, and correspondence containing public reaction. The files may also contain items pertaining to the arrangements made for the public appearance. Letters from the group prior to the speech, staff briefing memoranda, programs, and official acknowledgements may be included. The speeches are arranged chronologically by date of delivery with undated items placed at the end.

2) Articles and Letters to the Editor: arranged chronologically by date of publication. Drafts of proposed articles, also included here, are similarly arranged in chronological order by approximate date of writing. The folder for an individual article may contain outlines, drafts, galleys and final copies; it may also contain correspondence with the publisher and letters of public reaction.

3) Washington Report: the weekly columns Bowles wrote for publication in Second Congressional District newspapers. The files are arranged chronologically and include drafts and final copies.

4) Washington Newsletter: the printed newsletter Bowles wrote for mailing to his constituents. The newsletters are arranged chronologically. This subseries also contains the mailing lists and correspondence containing the public's response.

5) Press Releases: arranged chronologically; drafts and printed copies are included.

6) The Coming Political Breakthrough: materials pertaining to the book Bowles published during this period. There are drafts for the book arranged by sections, the completed, and the printer's copy. (A copy of the book is kept with the papers.) Comments on the manuscript by friends and notes and memoranda follow. Also included in this subseries are correspondence relating to publication, correspondence containing public reaction, and published reviews. Additional reviews will be found in a scrapbook of clippings in Part IV, Series V., in scrapbook 3.

Part V, III: Special Subjects, 1959-1960(13 boxes)*

Part V, Series III, Special Subjects, is composed of materials divided into five subjects;

- 1) House Foreign Affairs Committee
- 2) Bowles' Bills
- 3) Democratic Platform
- 4) Bowles for President Movement
- 5) Kennedy Campaign

1) House Foreign Affairs Committee: materials relating to Bowles' work on this Committee. Bills and resolutions considered by the Committee as well as printed copies of some hearings and background information are in this subseries. There is also material concerned with the Committee's special study mission to Europe in the fall of 1959; this material is organized by country. Folders may contain background information, notes, schedules, and correspondence relating to local arrangements.

2) Bowles' Bills: materials related to bills introduced by Bowles during the 86th Congress, including copies of the bills with background information and a small amount of related correspondence.

3) Democratic Platform: materials relating to Bowles' work as chairman of the Democratic Platform Committee. The subseries includes transcripts, programs, and summaries from the eight regional advanced platform hearings as well as a few items from the platform hearing during the convention. The subseries contains several folders of correspondence from the general public incorporating suggestions for planks in the platform. This correspondence is arranged by subject, i.e. Agriculture, Civil Rights, Clean Elections, Consumers, and the like. (Additional platform suggestions will be found in the Selected Correspondence in Part V, Series I.) Following this correspondence are the various drafts for the platform arranged by section and the printed copies of the final platform. The last items in the subseries relate to the presentation of the platform at the convention, and include scripts, cue sheets, and correspondence about the production of the documentary film with Ted Mills and Dore Schary.

4) Bowles-for-President-Movement; correspondence, press releases, leaflets, clippings, and correspondence of others. The correspondence is basically public opinion mail interspersed with some correspondence with local organizers such as Robert Rutland, Sheldon Newberger, and Eric Cox. Additional correspondence on this subject will be found in Part V, Series I, "Selected Correspondence." For reminiscences of the movement see the correspondence of Barbara Byers and Robert Rutland in Part VI, Series I, subseries 1 - General Correspondence.

5) The Kennedy Campaign: chiefly Bowles' drafts and suggestions for Kennedy's speeches. Also included are circulars, background material, and other campaign literature.

Part VI, I: Correspondence, 1961-1963

(45 boxes)

The Correspondence series is divided into five subseries:

- 1) General Correspondence
- 2) White House Correspondence
- 3) State Department Correspondence
- 4) Correspondence with Officials of Other Executive Departments
- 5) Position Papers and Memoranda

1) General Correspondence: all Bowles' correspondence except that with officials of the White House, State Department, or other executive departments. Correspondence with members of Congress, members of the press, heads of foreign governments, publishers, Connecticut friends, Indian friends, various organizations, state governors, any members of the judiciary, and family members as well as any constituent or fan mail may be found in the section. Although the quantity of correspondence is great, with a few exceptions, the quality of this correspondence with persons outside the government reflects Bowles' almost total absorption in the immediate pressures of his office. Bowles' letters are often routine and the subseries abounds with carbon copies of virtual form letters sent by aides. The correspondence is arranged in alphabetical order. Correspondence with well-known individuals or organizations has been placed in separate folders, each of which is listed in this register. The routine correspondence has been sorted into general alphabetical folders which precede the individual folders in the arrangement.

2) White House Correspondence: an alphabetical arrangement of all Bowles' correspondence with persons at the White House, including President Kennedy, his advisors, aides and press secretary. Correspondence of members of the Cabinet (found in subseries 4) is not included in White House correspondence, although the correspondence of the Vice-President and members of the Bureau of the Budget is.

3) State Department Correspondence: correspondence with all State Department officials including the Secretary of State, Assistant Secretaries, bureau chiefs, ambassadors, Bowles' office staff and lower echelons. The subseries is arranged as follows:

A selection of selected correspondence comes first. This section is arranged by name of correspondent and includes such important names as Dean Rusk, Adlai Stevenson, and John Kenneth Galbraith.

Following is a section of correspondence with ambassadors and other officers and personnel in the various U.S. Embassies and Missions around the world. This correspondence is arranged alphabetically by name of country; in most instances correspondence with an ambassador is filed under the name of the country of his assignment.

Next is the correspondence with the members of Bowles' office staff. Bowles encouraged and solicited ideas and suggestions from his staff, hence this correspondence is an important part of his papers. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by name of the staff member. (For an outline of the organization of the staff when Bowles was Kennedy's Special Representative, consult the Andrew Rice correspondence in this section, 1961 December 19.) Schedules, itineraries, lists, travel vouchers, appointment books, and Bowles' notes on his daily activities are at the end of this section. The daily crisis notes and office notes are an interesting record of calls made and people seen, and include occasional jottings on an important meeting such as the notes made during the Bay of Pigs crisis.

At the end of the subseries is a small section of correspondence with lesser known personnel in the State Department in Washington. This correspondence has been arranged chronologically.

4) Correspondence with Officials in Other Executive Agencies and Departments: correspondence with Cabinet members and their staffs as well as officials in agencies such as the Peace Corps, U.S. Information Agency, and the Central Intelligence Agency. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically with correspondence with well-known persons in individual folders and that with less-well known persons in general folders.

5) Memoranda and Position Papers: the memoranda that Bowles sent the President, Secretary of State and other government officials. These memoranda are important position papers on subjects ranging from economic assistance and the Alliance for Progress to U.S. policies in the Far East. They represent a major collection of Bowles' foreign policy proposals and ideas over his period as Under Secretary and as the President's Special Representative. Occasionally a list of persons to whom the memorandum was sent is filed along with it. The memoranda are arranged in chronological order.

Part VI, II: Speeches, Statements and Writings, 1961-1963(11 boxes)*

This section is divided into three subseries:

1) Speeches and Statements

2) Writings (except books)

3) The Conscience of a Liberal n.b. Since Bowles depended on his staff to help in the preparation of speeches and articles, the researcher interested in this phase of Bowles' activities should also review the correspondence with the office staff in the State Department Correspondence.

1) Speeches and Statements: speeches, television and radio addresses, press conferences, interviews, and testimony before Congress. This subseries is arranged chronologically by date of delivery, with undated items filed at the end. For any particular speech, a folder may contain drafts, outlines, notes, reading copy, and printed copies. In addition there are some audio tape recordings for some speeches. A list of these tapes will be found in Part IX.

2) Writings (except books): articles, proposed articles, and letters to the editor. The subseries is arranged chronologically, with undated items filed at the end. Published items are dated by date of appearance, and proposed items are dated by approximate date of writing. A folder for a particular article may contain outlines, drafts, printed copies, reprints, and mailing lists.

3) The Conscience of a Liberal: this book is a compilation of Bowles' best speeches and articles from 1945 through 1962. Jean Joyce made a preliminary selection and excerpted significant items. Henry Steele Commager was invited to edit the work and write an introduction. Most of the work was completed by June, 1962, and it was published in October, 1962.

In addition to a copy of the book, there are outlines, notes, the preliminary book manuscript, the final manuscript, galley, publicity and reviews. Those interested in the publication of the book should also see correspondence with Brandt and Brandt, Cass Canfield, Henry Steele Commager, Harper and Brothers, and Jean Joyce in the General Correspondence, with Philip Merrill in the State Department Correspondence, under "Bowles' Office Staff," and with USIA officials in "Correspondence with Officials in Other Executive Departments."

Part VII, I: Correspondence, 1963-1969

This series obviously represents only a fraction of the correspondence that Bowles handled as Ambassador. The correspondence was apparently carefully selected before shipment back to the U.S. There are neither letters from the Indian public nor the usual routine letters from the U.S. ordinarily answered by staff members. What remains is a compact, rich correspondence on the issues confronting the American mission and Bowles' personal correspondence with long-time friends. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by name of correspondent with unidentified items placed at the end. Important correspondents have been individually listed in this register. Other correspondence has been arranged in general letter folders. Since, however, this correspondence is so selective, even the general folders may contain a few letters from prominent individuals. Besides incoming and outgoing letters and their enclosures, the files may also contain speeches and articles by and clippings about the correspondent.

The correspondence with Lyndon Johnson, Dean Rusk, Bill Moyers, John Kenneth Galbraith, and Robert Kennedy is an important source of information on activities in New Delhi. The correspondence with Bowles' close friends also offers his overview as well as evidence of his personal views. See especially the correspondence with Douglas J. Bennet, Sr., James G. Rogers, Jr., William Benton, Abram Chayes, David Ginsburg, Bice Clemow, Philip Coombs, Edward Logue, and James C. Thomson, Jr.

There is abundant correspondence with Congress since Bowles made a continuing effort to have many Senators and Congressmen visit India. For good summaries of Bowles' plans for U.S. aid to Indian development and his attempts to get the necessary legislation passed, see the correspondence with Senators William Fulbright, Hubert Humphrey, Wayne Morse, and Congressman Henry Reuss.

Bowles' efforts to present economic and development plans to high-level members of the Indian government may be found in his correspondence with Moraji Desai, Indira Gandhi, C.S. Jha, L.K. Jha, T.T. Krishnamachari, Asoka Mehta, Jawaharlal Nehru, Triguna Sen, Lal Bahadur Shastri, and C. Subramaniam.

Specifically on the problems of Indian agriculture and food shortages see the correspondence with Orville Freeman, George McGovern, Wolf Ladejinsky, Charles E. Lindblom, and Walt Rostow. On the foreign currency appropriation and on the use of surplus rupees see the correspondence with Lucius Battle, David Bell, C. Douglas Dillon, Allen Ellender, Kermit Gordon, James P. Grant, John Rooney, Stuart Symington, Jerry Voorhis, and Harris Wofford. The John D. Rockefeller, III, and Harold Linder files contain discussions of India's financial outlook, as do the files with executives at the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development such as George D. Woods, Robert McNamara, and Escott Reid. On military aid to India see the correspondence with McGeorge Bundy and James P. Grant. With Professor David F. Cavers Bowles discussed the tensions between India and Pakistan and with Bernard Loshbough he discussed the problems of urban India. Fred Foyer and David J. McDonald were concerned about the progress of the Bokaro Steel Mill project and William H. Draper, Jr., John D. Rockefeller, III, and R. Ravenhold (filed under U.S. Government, AID) wrote on the problems of population control. For Bowles' ideas about India's future, written at the end of his term as ambassador, see his summary memo to the Secretary of State, William Rogers.

The Svetlana Allilueva correspondence is the prime source for information on Stalin's daughter's attempt to remain out of the Soviet Union and Bowles' efforts to aid her. Her file contains copies of the statement and letter to her children which she wrote when she first came to the U.S. Embassy. The files of Cass Canfield, Alan Schwartz, C.S. Jha, George Kennan, and Dean Rusk also contain correspondence relating to Svetlana.

Bowles sought public recognition of the importance of continued U.S. support for India. He cultivated members of the press and wrote articles on the problems India was facing. See the frequent correspondence with Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Norman Cousins, Gardner Cowles, Walter Lippmann, Ralph McGill, Lester Markel, John B. Oakes, Drew Pearson, James Reston, Robert Sherrod, and James B. Wiggins. Bowles also attempted to bring American specialists to India; see, for example, his correspondence with James Patton, Victor Reuther, and Walter Reuther.

Since memoranda from U.S. Mission staff members are filed in Part VII, Series III, there is only a small amount in this series relating to the internal organization of the Mission. Correspondence with William Crockett, Jr., Roger Jones, and Kenneth Keating, Bowles' successor, outlines the organization of the Mission. There is some correspondence with Mission staff members but this was usually when Bowles was away from India or before the staff member arrived or after departure. This type of correspondence can be useful for the general description of life in India or in the U.S. See correspondence with Douglas J. Bennet, Jr., Richard Celeste, Joseph Greene, Amos Jordan, John Lewis, Philip Merrill and John W. Shirley.

The correspondence reflects on subjects other than India. The U.S. Mission staff members named above kept Bowles informed on upcoming elections, social tensions, and assassinations. The Martin Luther King file contains clippings from the Indian press on King's assassination. On the critical issue of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, as early as May, 1964, the correspondence shows Bowles warning Johnson about this situation. On Vietnam see also the files for Hubert Humphrey, Wolf Ladejinsky, and Barry Zorthian. On Bowles' mission to Cambodia see the correspondence with Senator Mike Mansfield. For discussions of the Peace Corps see correspondence with R. Sargent Shriver, Jack Vaughn, and Harris Wofford.

At the end of the correspondence section there is a folder labeled "letters sent to multiple recipients." This folder contains some of Bowles' memoranda and position papers which were widely circulated, as well as mailing lists for other items. The folder also contains a few of the mimeographed summary letters that Bowles sent to family and friends.

Part VII, II: Speeches, Statements, and Writings, 1963-1969

(3 boxes)

Part VII, Series II is divided into two subseries:

1) Speeches and Statements

2) Writings

1) Speeches and Statements: Bowles' speeches, statements, and press conferences, arranged in chronological order. Unidentified items are filed at the end. A particular folder may contain drafts, final copies, notes, staff memoranda containing background information, and press comments on a speech. Frequently, however, there is no complete transcript, and all that exists is a press release quoting from the text.

2) Writings: articles, proposed articles, and books. The subseries is arranged in chronological order by date of publication or by approximate date of writing for those items never published. Items which are undated or unidentified follow. For any article a folder may contain notes, staff memoranda, drafts, and printed copies. Copies of Bowles' two books, The Makings of a Just Society and A View from New Delhi have been kept with the papers. There are, however, no drafts for either book. The lectures which are the basis for The Makings of a Just Society will be found in Speeches and Statements. A View from New Delhi is based on Bowles' previous speeches and writings, and the originals must be located through the files. At the end of "Writings" there are six folders of columns Bowles wrote between 1966 and 1969 for the American Reporter, the U.S. Information Service fortnightly paper in India. The folders contain a complete run of the columns in printed form or typescript as well as a schedule of their appearance.

Part VII, III: Special Subjects, 1963-1969(21 boxes)*

This series is a combination of what originally was a clippings file, arranged by subject, and a subject file of materials used in the writing of Bowles' autobiography, Promises to Keep. The series is arranged in three subseries.

- 1) U.S. Mission to India
- 2) India
- 3) Other Countries and Areas

In each subseries one may find staff memoranda giving subject information, reports, printed material, notes by the Ambassador or his staff, and clippings.

1) United States Mission to India: a collection dealing specifically with the functioning of the Embassy in New Delhi, the U.S. Information Service, the Peace Corps, and with Americans then in India as representatives of the U.S. Government. The largest amount of material in this section deals with the Ambassador's office, and Bowles' functioning within that office. Here there are memoranda from staff members on such topics as important meetings, Congressional delegations to India, mail, scheduling, etc. There is also a set of appointment books. Included in this section is a file for each trip taken by Bowles outside of New Delhi to give a speech, to take a vacation, or to meet with representatives of other governments as, for example, his mission to Cambodia in 1968. These files may contain schedules, thank-you letters for hospitality, staff memoranda with background material on the area and people to be visited, pictures, and Bowles' own notes and reports on the trip.

2) India: a useful source of information on the history and culture of India and a fairly complete reference to the events and developments in India between 1963 and 1969. The material is arranged under nearly 50 subject headings, i.e., Family Planning, Food and Agriculture, etc. The information comes from a wide range of sources: summary memoranda by Mission staff members, printed material from both Indian and U.S. government sources, universities, and philanthropic foundations and the public press. The clippings in this section are particularly useful since many of the clippings come from Indian newspapers not always available in the United States. Most of these are English language papers though some clippings are in the various Indian languages and there are many from the Communist press.

3) Other Countries and Areas: a less complete section than the other two. Only the section on Pakistan contains important memoranda and extensive background material.

Part IX, I: Photographs and Memorabilia, 1924-1969(14 boxes)*

Photographs and Memorabilia is arranged in two subseries:

1) Photographs

2) Memorabilia

1) Photographs: a pictorial record of all phases of Bowles' public career as well as pictures of Bowles as a child and a young man. The photographs of Bowles' public career are arranged at the beginning of the subseries, roughly in chronological order. Of special interest are photographs taken of war-ravaged Europe during Bowles' trip in 1948, photographs of India taken during both ambassadorships, and photographs from the funerals of Jawaharlal Nehru and Lal Bahadur Shastri. Formal portraits and candid snapshots of Bowles, his wife, family and friends are arranged at the end of the subseries.

2) Memorabilia: scrapbooks, citations, awards, plaques, and membership cards. Of special interest are a dozen or more original cartoons relating to OPA (See Folios 1 and 3).

Part IX, II: Informational Files, 1941-1969(9 boxes)*

Reports, printed material, clippings, notes, unidentified drafts not authored by Bowles and other types of background material arranged by subject. Bowles' original list of subject headings is filed in the first folder. Some headings have been changed in this register for purposes of clarity. The materials cover subjects of Bowles' general interest and may have been used in preparing books, articles, and speeches for himself or for other reference purposes. Material in the files dates from 1941 through 1969, although the publication date of an item may not reflect the actual date when Bowles used the material. Some items may have originally been sent to Bowles by correspondents and later separated from their letters of transmittal.

Part IX, III: Diaries and Oral Histories, 1941-1975(8 boxes)*

Bowles' recollections and reminiscences both in the form of diary entries and oral histories and oral history interviews with Bowles' associates are arranged in the following subseries:

- 1) Diaries
- 2) Oral History Interviews with Bowles
- 3) Oral History Interviews with Bowles' Associates

1) Diaries: the diaries are arranged in chronological order and are for the most part retrospective rather than daily accounts. Though the diaries span Bowles' entire public career they are quite fragmentary. Only the volumes of the diary written during the second ambassadorship, the New Delhi diaries (beginning in 1963), approach completeness.

note TO "NEW DELHI DIARIES": A typewritten rough "transcript" accompanies each of the "New Delhi Diaries." The transcriptions were made by close associates of Bowles, long familiar with his difficult handwriting. Although the transcripts have been roughly reviewed against the originals, many words and phrases, especially where Indian names are given have not been satisfactorily deciphered. Here and there a whole sentence, even a paragraph, may have been omitted in the transcriptions.

Researchers will wish to check closely with the handwritten originals, Quotation from the Diaries can be made only with specific permission of Manuscripts and Archives.

2) Oral History Interviews with Bowles: transcripts of oral history interviews with Bowles done for the Columbia Oral History Project, the John F. Kennedy Library, and the Lyndon B. Johnson Library.

3) Oral History Interviews with Bowles' Associates: most of the interviews were recorded between 1973 and 1975 by Jean Joyce at the request of Bowles, though he did not review them. The oral histories are an illuminating supplement to the written record and cover Bowles' career from the 1930's through his many periods of public service.

Manuscripts and Archives holds the audio tapes and transcripts of the interviews under terms stipulated in an instrument of gift. Most transcripts are made available for research in accordance with the regulations and policies of the Yale University Library governing the use of manuscripts. In cases where this is not true, i.e., where the interviewee requires, his written authorization before a transcript may be used, a note is made to this effect on the list of interviews that follows. Interviewees must be consulted regarding the publication of their interviews or of extensive excerpts from them. After the death of the interviewee, authorization for publication must be secured from the Yale University Library. Audio tapes of the interviews will be made available to researchers only with the written authorization of the interviewee.

Correspondence and other types of records relating to family matters and other aspects of Bowles' private life. A section of this material (primarily correspondence about Bowles' interest in boating and other recreational pursuits) is open. This material includes correspondence about buying, selling, repairing, and charting boats and about cruises, yacht clubs, and arrangements to meet friends. There is correspondence with Herbert Stone of Yachting Magazine and Douglas J. Bennet, Sr. This material dates from 1942 through 1968 and is arranged chronologically.

Part IX, V: Audio Tapes, Video Tapes, Movies, Phonograph Records, 1948-1969

6 Boxes and Historical Sound Recordings

This series contains material from 1948 through 1969. The series is divided into the following subseries:

1) Audio Tapes

2) Phonograph Recordings

3) Videotapes and Movie Films

1) Audio Tapes: recordings of speeches, press conferences, interviews, debates, campaign advertisements, and radio broadcasts by Bowles and others. The tapes date from 1950 through 1969 and are arranged roughly in chronological order. Many of the tapes are unidentified except by date, especially for the period 1959-1960. These may be tapes of weekly radio broadcasts to Bowles' Congressional district. Transcripts or excerpts for several of the tapes will be found filed in the Speeches and Statements Series for the appropriate part of the papers. Tapes may be played on the equipment in the Historical Sound Recordings in the Yale Library.

2) Phonograph Recordings: these date mostly from the period 1948-1950 with a few later items. They include speeches, campaign advertisements, and radio broadcasts made by Bowles and others. They may be used in Historical Sound Recordings in Yale Library. Transcripts for some of the recordings will be found filed in the speeches and statements series in the appropriate part.

3) Videotapes and Movie Films: materials date from 1950 through 1969 include Bowles' television appearances, home movies, and several items which can only be identified or dated approximately. The subseries is arranged in chronological order with, undated items filed at the end. Items can be viewed at the Audio Visual Center.

Original audiovisual materials, as well as preservation and duplicating masters, may not be played. Researchers must consult use copies, or if none exist must pay for a use copy, which is retained by the repository. Researchers wishing to obtain an additional copy for their personal use should consult Copying Services information on the Manuscripts and Archives web site.

Audio Tapes

Original audiotapes, videotapes, and motion picture films, as well as preservation and duplicating masters, may not be played. Researchers must consult use copies, or pay for the creation of a use copy, retained by the repository, if none exist. Copies of commercially produced audiovisual materials contained in this collection cannot be made for researcher use outside of the repository.
