Biographical / Historical

The Howard R. Lamar Center for the Study of Frontiers and Borders at Yale University was established to further the advanced historical study of North American frontiers and borders, as well as the comparative study of the frontier experience throughout the world.

The Center honors Howard Roberts Lamar, Sterling Professor Emeritus of History and former President of the University. Lamar, well-known for his pivotal contributions to the field of western history, continues to work as a scholar and adviser. His The New Encyclopedia of the American West (Yale University Press) was described by historian Stephen E. Ambrose as "a monumental achievement in the historiography of the American West. Howard Lamar had rendered our nation a great service by compiling this magisterial and indispensable reference volume."

The Center's principal priority is the support of graduate study in the departments of History and American Studies at Yale University by providing grants for dissertation research on topics relating to the Center's scholarly interests, by sponsoring talks and workshops by scholars, and in keeping with Howard Lamar's dedication and generosity of spirit as a teacher, mentor, and friend to generations of Yale students, by seeking to create at Yale a community of mutually-supportive scholars interested in frontiers and borders.
