CALL NUMBER: MS 2046

CREATOR: Sturgis, Russell, 1836-1909

TITLE: Russell Sturgis, Jr., papers

DATES: 1808-circa 1940

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 3.67 linear feet (6 boxes)

LANGUAGE: The materials are in English.

SUMMARY: The papers primarily document the personal and family life of Russell Sturgis, Jr., and include little documentation of his professional career as an architect except for clippings of articles, reviews, and obituaries contained in a scrapbook. The bulk of the collection consists of family correspondence, including letters, dated 1863-1864, written by Sturgis' brother, Appleton, while serving in the Union army, and early writings from Sturgis' college years. There are also sketchbooks of landscape and architectural drawings from European trips taken by Sturgis, dated 1858-1883, as well as a small number of family photographs.

Biographical / Historical

Russell Sturgis, Jr. (1836-1909), the son of Russell (1804-1873) and Margaret Dawes Appleton Sturgis, was born in Chantilly, Baltimore County, Delaware. He was the oldest of four children, with two brothers, Appleton and Edward, and a sister, Kate. The family's primary residence was in New York City, where Russell, Jr., graduated from the Free Academy of New York (now the City College of New York) in 1856. He studied architecture under Leopold Eidlitz and then, in 1858, travelled to Europe, where he spent some time studying in Munich. After returning to America in 1862, he married Sarah Maria Barney, daughter of Danford N. Barney, in 1864. They had seven children: Margaret (Mrs. Hector W. Thomas), Danford N. B. (a twin brother of Danford died at birth), Beatrice Cynthia Barney (Mrs. Philip Golden Bartlett), Sarah B., and twins Lyman B. (Van) and Edward B. Sturgis was an architect who designed buildings across the eastern part of the country, with the majority in New York state and Connecticut. These included four buildings at Yale: Farnham Hall (1868), Durfee Hall (1870), Battell Chapel (1872-73), and Lawrance Hall (1884). While not unsuccessful as an architect, he was more well-known as a commentator on architecture and art. He was a prolific author of articles published in the popular press and in professional journals. In addition to editing Dictionary of Architecture and Building and a revision of Wilhelm Lübke's Outline of the History of Art, he was the author of several volumes, including European Architecture: A Historical Study, How to Judge Architecture, and A History of Architecture. He was active in many professional and artistic organizations, including the American Institute of Architects and the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He received an honorary degree from Yale in 1872 and served as the Chair of Architecture and the Arts of Design at City College from 1878-to 1880, when ill health led him to retire from his professorship and to curtail his architectural practice. He continued write and lecture on art and architecture until shortly before his death on February 11, 1909 in New York City.

	Painter Family	1900
	The original documents were written by Thomas Painter in 1836. Included in the biographical material is information on Thomas Painter's service during the Revolutionary War, first in the militia and later in the navy. There is also significant information on his maritime career before and after the war. The versions in this collection are manuscript copies made by his granddaughter, Alice Bartlett, in 1900. There are also some loose pages of genealogical information concerning the Painter family. The material became part of the Sturgis family records through Philip Golden Bartlett, brother of Alice Bartlett and husband of Russell Sturgis' daughter Beatrice.
