W. J. Linton (1812-1897)

The British wood engraver, author, historian, printer, publisher, and political activist William James Linton was born in London on December 7, 1812. He immigrated to New York in 1866 and in 1867 settled at Appledore, a small farm and cottage in Hamden, Connecticut, just north of New Haven. There he founded his Appledore Private Press and wrote and printed several of his most notable works including The Masters of Wood-Engraving (1886). Linton died in New Haven, at the home of his daughter Margaret Linton Mather, on December 29, 1897.

Scope and Contents

The W. J. Linton Collection chiefly contains William James Linton's papers, including correspondence, autograph manuscripts and other writings by and about Linton, graphic work, and personal papers, which were inherited by his daughters Ellen Wade Linton and Margaret Linton Mather, when their father died in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1897. It includes literary and graphic material that Linton brought with him when he emigrated from England to the United States in the mid-1860s, as well as work he accomplished while living in Connecticut. Once the papers entered the Yale University Library beginning in 1911, they were added through 1929 by family members and by gifts from three local admirers of Linton who were also friends of the family: the engraver William Fowler Hopson and two Yale graduates, Howard Mansfield and Alfred E. Hamill. These substantial gifts combine to comprise the largest group of Linton's autograph literary manuscripts, examples of engravings and other printed work he created both in England and the United States, and material related to Linton's classic works The History of Wood Engraving in America (1882) and Masters of Wood Engraving (1886).

Arrangement

Organized into six series: I. Correspondence, 1829-1931. II. Writings by Linton, 1845-1898. III. Writings about Linton, 1839-1937. IV. Graphic Material, 1838-1913. V. Personal Papers, 1838-1902. VI. Other Papers, 1797-1922.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1829–1931

0.84 linear feet (2 boxes)

The series primarily contains single letters from friends and colleagues and many of whom are engravers or family members of engravers writing in reply to Linton's inquiries about the profession and history of wood engraving, as well as from others, such as the artist William Page who wrote to praise Linton for his fine work in reproducing one of his paintings. Another prominent group of correspondents are those asking for permission to use Linton's poems in anthologies, while two poets, Walter Savage Landor and Richard Henry Stoddard, wrote to send poems they had written about Linton. High-profile correspondents include Ralph Waldo Emerson (writing about an oil portrait of himself by David Scott that Linton was engraving), William Morris, John Ruskin (writing about Brantwood, Linton's home that Ruskin acquired when Linton moved to the United States), and Walt Whitman. Several of the letters in the series are related to Linton's work with Guiseppe Mazzini and the Central Committee of the Friends of Poland. The subseries Letters from Linton holds an interesting set of letters to H. W. Thompson giving him instructions for the dispersal and disposal of papers Linton had left behind in England. The subseries Third-party Correspondence holds a small group of letters that others, including family members, wrote or received about Linton and his work.

Series I is organized into three subseries: Letters to Linton, Letters from Linton, and Third-party Correspondence.
