CALL NUMBER: GEN MSS 663

CREATOR: Acton, Harold, 1904-1994

TITLE: Harold Acton papers

DATES: 1932–1941

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 3.83 linear feet (5 boxes)

LANGUAGE: English

SUMMARY: The collection consists of manuscript and typescript drafts of Harold Acton's translations of Chinese literary works and his writings; correspondence from Chinese, English, and American scholars and friends; material relating to a lecture tour of Italy; and other papers. Highlights include the unpublished manuscript for Popular Chinese Plays, which was once thought lost, as well as correspondence concerning its projected publication by Henry Vetch. Also included is an annotated typescript and related correspondence for Acton's novel, Peonies and Ponies (1941). Material sheds light on the development of literary translation between Chinese and English and the influence of China on British intellectual history and literary life during the period preceding the Second World War.

Administrative Information

Immediate Source of Acquisition

Purchased from Simon Finch on the Edwin J. Beinecke Book Fund, 2009.

Custodial History

This archive was given by Harold Acton to his only godson, the Hon. Martin Parsons (1938 -), younger son of Michael Parsons, sixth Earl of Rosse (1906-1979). The gift was made in memory of the Hon. Desmond Parsons, younger brother of Michael, who died prematurely in 1937 at the early age of 26.

Conditions Governing Access

The materials are open for research.

Conditions Governing Use

The Harold Acton Papers is the physical property of the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University. Literary rights, including copyright, belong to the authors or their legal heirs and assigns. For further information, consult the appropriate curator.

Preferred Citation

Harold Acton Papers. General Collection, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University.

Processing Information

The material was contained in the original leather trunk in which it was packed for dispatch from Beijing, China, after the invasion of the Japanese in 1937. According to the dealer, the integrity of the archive was strictly maintained and nothing was removed. Individual items were placed in transparent sleeves and numbered according to the dealer description.

Upon receipt by the library, material was removed from the trunk and rehoused in acid-free folders and boxes; individual items were removed from sleeves. The material has largely been maintained in the order in which it was described in the description provided by the dealer. Information in the biographical and Description of the Papers notes and in the Collection Contents section is drawn almost entirely from the dealer description. This information has not been verified, and is included in the finding aid in order to provide more detail about the context and content of the collection.

Harold Acton (1904-1994)

Harold Acton was a British writer and scholar. His works include The Last Medici (1932), The Bourbons of Naples, 1734-1825 (1956), and two memoirs, Memoirs of an Aesthete (1948) and More Memoirs of an Aesthete (1970).

Acton lived in China from 1933 to 1939, during which time he supported himself by teaching English Literature and collaborated with others to translate various Chinese literary works. His translations include Glue and Lacquer: Four Cautionary Tales (1941) and the unpublished Popular Chinese Plays. He wrote a novel, Peonies and Ponies (1941), about British expatriate life in Beijing before the Second World War. Acton returned to England in 1939 and shortly thereafter embarked upon a lecture tour of Italy under the auspices of the British Council to promote continuing ties between England and Italy at a time when the two countries were on the verge of war.

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of manuscript and typescript drafts of Harold Acton's translations of Chinese literary works and his writings; correspondence from Chinese, English, and American scholars and friends; material relating to Acton's lecture tour of Italy; and other papers. Highlights include the unpublished manuscript for Popular Chinese Plays, as well as correspondence concerning its projected publication by Henry Vetch. Also included is an annotated typescript and related correspondence for Acton's novel, Peonies and Ponies (1941). Material sheds light on the development of literary translation between Chinese and English, and the influence of China on British intellectual history and literary life during the period preceding the Second World War.

The bulk of the material--translations, writings, correspondence--was created and accumulated by Acton during his residence in China and in the course of his literary work there as a translator and writer. Upon Acton's departure from China, the material was packed into a trunk and shipped to London. Other material--such as that stemming from Acton's lecture tour of Italy--was presumably added to the trunk later, before being given to Acton's godson, Martin Parsons.

Arrangement

The collection is organized into four series: I. Translations and Writings, 1933-1941. II. Correspondence, 1935-1941. III. Other Papers, 1932-1941. IV. Lecture Tour in Italy, 1940.

Collection Contents

Series I: Translations and Writings, 1933–1941

2.2 linear feet

This series consists of manuscript and annotated typescript drafts of Acton's translations of Chinese plays and stories, a draft of his novel, Peonies and Ponies, and book reviews, and correspondence relating to his translations and writings.

Largely arranged in the order in which it was received from the dealer.

Popular Chinese Plays

By 1937, "the Peking Theatre had become my chief pastime...I spent half the day translating the plays... with my teacher Mr.Chou who knew no English..." Preparation for publication which was agreed in 1939 before Acton left China and for which final proofs were sent to the publishers from England. Because of the war, the book was never printed. "A stout volume of these translations was to have been published by Henry Vetch of the French Bookstore, but beyond correcting some proofs just before the outbreak of war, I have not heard of them since. The manuscript must count as a war casualty." (Acton in More Memoirs of an Aesthete.)

It seems likely that the translations are those of Rose Fêng but Acton has made corrections to improve the meaning of the poetry in English.
b. 1, f. 70	Chinese Music by J. A. Van Aalst, published by order of The Inspector General of Customs and re-issued and sold by The French Bookstore, Peiping, 1933. With Acton's signature on front cover.	1933
	"The Palace of Longevity" Changshengdian – The Hall of Everlasting Life (alternative title). Author Hung Shêng (with a second name Fang-Szu). Translated by Harold Acton and Dr. H. H. Hu. The translation into English of this lengthy drama done in collaboration with Dr. H. H. Hu (see correspondence) was clearly never published nor performed in London as Acton had hoped. While Acton has labelled the hand-written and typed translations "The Palace of Longevity," the alternative translation "The Hall of Everlasting Life" is the title used in his autobiography.
